U. S. Secretary Loses in Attempt To Have Peace Meeting Date Set

By JOSEPH DYNAN

PARIS, May 15 (AP)—The foreign ministers of the four major Allied powers agreed tonight to meet again June 15 and probably will adjourn their current deadlocked conference tomorrow.

In deciding on the month-long adjournment, the ministers also accepted a proposal by United States Secretary of State James F. Byrnes to attempt in the interim to work out their present disagreements.

Byrnes, reported by his associates as "very discouraged" over the results of this conference, lost in his attempt to have the foreign ministers set a definite date now for the European peace conference and to have the Austrian treaty included on the conference agenda. Russia objected to both, the American informants said.

Soviet Foreign Minister Vyacheslav M. Molotov and the others agreed, however, to revise the terms of the Italian armistice. This was agreed to in principle less than two weeks ago and Byrnes suggested last night that the four powers sign the revision.

Vandenberg Won't Return

Byrnes, at a conference session this morning, proposed that American, British, Russian and French representatives begin immediately to draft terms for a German treaty to be presented to a peace conference on Germany next November 12, American sources said, but no action was taken on this immediately.

Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg, (R-Mich), minority leader of the Senate Foreign Relations committee, told the Associated Press after tonight's session:

"I will not come back to Paris for the June 15 meeting."

Asked who would represent the Republican party at the next foreign ministers session, Vandenberg replied, "As the Russians would say, we'll cross that bridge when we come to it."

Molotov, French Foreign Minister Georges Bidault and British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin were said to have asked time to study

SENATE GROUP VOTES OPA YEAR'S EXTENSION

WASHINGTON, May 15 (AP) — The Senate Banking committee voted 11 to 5 today for a year's extension of OPA, then took a four-day recess to enable members to prepare amendments to the extension bill.

Chairman Wagner (D-NY) expressed hope that all the amendments will be presented by Monday, the next meeting day, so they can be voted upon Tuesday. He hopes to get final committee action by the following Friday and call the bill up in the Senate May 27.

U. S. Defies Reds In Case Involving Embassy Clerk

Washington Demands Waldo Ruess Be Allowed To Quit Soviet

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON, May 15 (AP) — The American State department and the Russian foreign office, already in numerous bigger disagreements over policy, were disclosed today to be at loggerheads over the case of a United States embassy clerk charged with "hoolliganism" in Moscow.

The rights of the clerk as a diplomatic employe of the American government already have been the subject of two emphatic exchanges between the Russians and embassy officials. The affair promises more fireworks.

The clerk is Waldo Ruess, Hollywood, Calif., a junior employe of the embassy. The charges allegedly were brought against him on behalf of an actress of the Soviet state theater.

At the moment, according to information coming to Washington, Ruess is sticking close to embassy premises in Moscow. So long as he is on embassy property under American flag protection the Russians may not under international usage arrest him.

Meanwhile, State department officials are drafting new instructions to the embassy. These seem certain to follow a policy of stout defiance of Russian efforts to hail Ruess into the Moscow city prosecutor's office.

Essentially the issue is one of diplomatic immunity. The United States accords diplomatic immunity to the clerks and similar employs of foreign missions when such people are natives of the countries they serve. This country contends that the Russians should extend a comparable right.

But this legal position is complicated with other things. Mainly, there appears to be strong belief among officials here that the Rus-

U.N. Charter Must Be Strengthened, O'Conor Asserts

Governor Compares U. S. after Revolution with World of Today

BALTIMORE, May 15 (AP)—Similarities between conditions in the United States after the American Revolution and those now existent throughout the world, were cited tonight by Gov. O'Conor in the course of a plea for strong American leadership for successful application of the United Nations Charter.

"The scale is different," the governor said, "but the principles are identical. The Constitution of the United States created a family tie between 'We the people.' The Charter of the United Nations will be successful only if it becomes a family tie for 'All the people.'"

O'Conor, a candidate for the Democratic nomination to the United States Senate for the seat now held by Sen. George L. Radcliffe (D-Md), prepared his remarks for delivery to the Uptown Lions Club of Baltimore.

"The growing pains of our federal Constitution must have seemed as frightening then as the occasional spasms of the Charter now," O'Conor said.

With the split between Hamilton and Madison, he continued, with troubles inside the Washington cabinet and differences throughout the country, the situation "looked terrible—almost as much so as some of our daily headlines."

"But there were men in those days who had no end of patience . . . no end of faith. There were people, going about their daily business of making a living, who refused to be stampeded into surrendering their hopes. Compromises were made. Quarrels were mended. Time—the great healer—was allowed to do its work. The Constitution lived, and grew strong.

"Remembering all that, America must not be discouraged but must work and plan and co-operate in the strengthening and the growth of the Charter."

In a review of local problems, O'Conor declared the state must modernize its institutions and highways and solve the new problems of education and public financing brought on by the war. Among federal problems of paramount concern, he listed improved labor-management relations and balancing of the budget.

Lane Accuses Tydings Of "Deserting" Him

BALTIMORE, May 15 (AP) — William Preston Lane, Jr., candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, accused Sen. Tydings (D-Md) today of "deserting" him after advising him to run for the nomination.

Lane declared that Tydings, "with his own future political interests in mind," deserted him to make an alliance with Attorney General William Curran in favor of J. Millard Tawes, one of Lane's opponents.

Meanwhile, both Lane and H. Streett Baldwin, third major candidate for the nomination, granted that Tawes was right in saying they had sought Curran's support.

UNRRA Director Proposes Darker Bread, No Pastry

LaGuardia Suggests Farmers Be "Required" To Market Their Wheat

WASHINGTON, May 15. (AP)—UNRRA Director Fiorello LaGuardia proposed today still darker bread and no pastry for all Americans and suggested that farmers be "required" to market their wheat.

The international relief chief shied away from urging outright "seizure" of wheat on the farms. He told a news conference it wouldn't be that because farmers would be paid for the grain.

LaGuardia recommended that millers be compelled to extract ninety per cent of the wheat kernel in manufacturing flour. The Government now requires eighty per cent, compared with seventy-two before the world food shortage became severe and eighty-five per cent suggested by Stabilization Director Chester Bowles.

As for no pastry, the chunky UNRRA chief declared: "I'm for that. We could all save enough to buy ourselves smaller girdles."

Mill Shutdown Looms

As LaGuardia was advancing his ideas as a means of assuring more food for famine areas abroad, Agriculture department officials were uneasily eyeing prospects of a six-week shutdown of flour mills. And they were uncertain whether flour stocks are big enough to tide the country over until the new wheat crop starts coming on the market in July.

Secretary Anderson is known to be considering the possibility of diverting to the mills some wheat bought by the government for shipment overseas. While that would keep the mills grinding it, it would not necessarily increase flour for home consumption, since the finished products still might be exported.

The plight of the mills results from the fact that they were required on May 1 to cut wheat stocks to a twenty-one-day supply. Many have been unable to get wheat since because they can offer only the ceiling price for it while the government will pay farmers a bonus of thirty cents a bushel over the ceiling to obtain wheat to meet foreign commitments.

Caught in the squeeze, some millers already have quit operations.

Food Conditions Will Be Probed

Along with this development, the House Agriculture committee arranged to begin tomorrow a thorough investigation of both the domestic and world food conditions.

And from the weather bureau came reports that insects, diseases and bad weather continue to beset the winter wheat crop.

Train Carrying American Women and Children Is Fired On in Germany

FRANKFURT, Germany, May 15 (AP) — Two shots were fired last night at a trainload of American women and children on their way to join United States occupation soldiers in Germany, the army announced tonight. No one was injured.

The army, which kept the incident secret for twenty-three hours, said the shots struck an upper compartment of the train, which was en route from Bremerhaven to Frankfurt. The names of the occupants of the compartment were not disclosed.

Army authorities began an immediate investigation.

ODT-Operated Railroad Will Be Strike-Exempt

Precedent for Staying on Job if U. S. Seizes May Have Been Set

WASHINGTON, May 15. (AP)—Railroad engineers and trainmen who have scheduled a strike for Saturday may have set a precedent today for staying on the job if the government seizes the carriers.

Alvanley Johnson, chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, announced that a decision not to walk out on the Illinois Central line had been reached as "a safety measure."

Johnston refused to discuss reasons for the "safety measure," but the Illinois Central is technically operated by the Office of Defense Transportation as a result of a previous strike threat.

The engineers' leader would not say that government control of the line was the reason for the exemption, nor would he deny it.

Seizure of the nation's other rail carriers would create a national situation comparable to that on the Illinois Central.

President Truman has said he would not hesitate to seize the railroads in the event of a crippling strike.

"We thought it over," Johnston told a reporter, "and regard it (the Illinois Central exemption) as the thing to do at this time. It's the way it stands now. We can give it further consideration."

The Illinois Central development came during a lull in the negotiations over union demands on pay and working conditions. Only the engineers and trainmen have scheduled the Saturday strike, but other operating brotherhoods are moving toward a walkout.

Johnston said the conferences, begun last night, will be resumed at 10 a. m. tomorrow. He added

Six Sisters Whose Ages Average 74 Take Off On First Plane Ride

COLUMBUS, O., May 15 (AP)—Six Ohio sisters whose ages averaged 74 took off today for Louisville in a commercial airliner on their first plane ride.

As the plane was readied for flight, the elderly woman explained that they always got together for various birthdays and that this year they wanted to do "something different."

Occasion for the trip was the birthday of Fred Weber, Louisville, a son of the women.

Roads Commission Recommends Boost In State Gas Tax

BALTIMORE, May 15 (AP) — An increase in the Maryland gasoline tax was recommended to the legislative council today by the state roads commission.

In a memorandum prepared for submission to the council by Robert M. Reindollar, roads chairman, the commission said the full amount of the revenue from such a gasoline tax increase should go "to the state roads commission for the sole purpose of rehabilitating and extending the primary system of state highways."

The roads group said that in its opinion "there is an inequitable distribution of funds for highway purposes." It suggested that the council appoint a committee to study such distribution.

The commission asked also "complete authority to regulate traffic on the state highway system, including connecting roads through incorporated towns."

The group urged amendment of the statutes "relating to the collection of tolls on the Susquehanna and Potomac river bridges, after revenue bonds have been entirely redeemed or matured, so as to repay the (roads) commission the amount of total costs incurred in the operation of the bridges during the life of the bonds."

At an earlier session today, the council heard a complaint by the Maryland Classified Employers' Association that loopholes in state

Security Council Will Take Up Secrecy Rule

NEW YORK, May 15 (AP) — A proposed rule which would permit the United Nations Security Council to keep its proceedings secret even from fellow members of the United Nations will come before the council tomorrow with strong indications it will be approved.

A report by the council's committee of experts embodying this proposal and a resolution proposed by the United States on procedure regarding new members are the only two items on the council's agenda.

There was no provision for discussion tomorrow of the Iranian situation.

Thus it is expected that Andrei A. Gromyko, Soviet delegate who refused to discuss Iran in the council and boycotted the last council meeting May 8, will attend.

Louisiana Court Lacks Authority To Save Negro

Attorney Says Youth "Must Not" Make Second Trip to Chair

NEW ORLEANS, May 15 (AP) — Louisiana's supreme court ruled today that it lacks authority to interfere with a second trip to the electric chair for Willie Francis, 18, negro, after the state failed in its first attempt to execute him for murder.

The justices held unanimously, in denying writs, that the court proceedings were entirely in order and that Francis is "in legal custody" of the St. Martin parish sheriff. In the first scheduled electrocution Francis emerged unharmed because the chair's equipment failed.

Attorneys said they would seek the only avenues of escape which remain — the state pardon board and the federal courts.

"My client must not go to the chair," said Bertrand De Blanc, St. Martinville lawyer. "Such physical torture would shock the good people of the country. I am planning to carry this case into the federal courts on the grounds of double jeopardy, cruel and unusual punishment and deprivation of life without due process of law."

De Blanc also declared that he would seek clemency from the pardon board, as did Attorneys A. T. Tureaud and Joseph A. Thornton.

The youthful Francis, sentenced to die for the robbery-killing of a St. Martinsville druggist, was held in the death cell of the New Iberia jail. A reprieve granted by Lt. Gov. Emile Verret to permit time for the supreme court action which failed today will expire June 7.

The supreme court held that it had no authority to set aside the order of execution, and that it also lacked authority to issue a commutation or pardon.

Francis was strapped into the state's portable electric chair at St. Martinsville May 3. The hood was placed over his head, and an executioner threw the switch. But nothing happened. A wire in the control box was loose, and no current coursed

U. S. Conciliators Halt Negotiations After Operators Reject Levy Plan

President Receives "No Progress" Report, Not Contract He Asked

NEW GOVERNMENT MOVE IS SPECULATED

Producers and Miners Will Resume Talks when Requested To Do So

WASHINGTON, May 15—(AP)—Deadlocked over John L. Lewis's demand for a seven per cent payroll levy, coal peace talks were broken off today and the negotiators went to the White House with empty hands instead of the signed contract requested by President Truman.

The president, after hearing their "no progress" report, told them to some back to the executive offices tomorrow morning for further conferences.

Government conciliators had stepped in and halted the negotiations between Lewis and the operators after the latter flatly rejected the program for a union-controlled health and welfare fund to be financed by the mine owners through a payroll levy.

The president had called for an agreement by today and the failure to reach it created some speculation of a new government move in the offing, to prevent a resumption of the soft coal strike on the expiration of the two weeks' truce on May 25. Reconversion Director John W. Snyder said that the president would take "every possible action."

Mr. Truman's conference with Lewis and Charles O'Neill, operators' spokesman, lasted forty minutes. Afterward Charles G. Ross, presidential secretary, told reporters "no progress was made toward a settlement."

Negotiators' Faces Are Solemn

He said he did not know whether the president had offered any proposal for the parties to study overnight.

O'Neill and Lewis, leaving the White House with solemn faces, had no comment beyond saying that they would be on hand tomorrow as the president had requested.

Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach, also a participant in the meeting, remained behind for a private conference with the president after Lewis and O'Neill departed. Later he said Mr. Truman and his advisers will decide after tomorrow's session whether it will be worth while to start up the negotiations again.

The only encouragement received from today's meeting, the secretary said, was that "it is worth while to bring them back tomorrow."

MAN, 74, ASKS DIVORCE FROM MISSING BRIDE, 16

HOUSTON, Mo., May 15 (AP) — T. W. Sutton, 74, asked a divorce today from his missing 16-year-old bride, saying he believed she had "left home with another man."

The petition named no other man.

She hasn't turned up at the nearby home of her mother nor in San Pablo, Calif., where her father, Frank L. Holden, who objected to the marriage, is a sawmill worker.

Army Major Wants To Share Fate Of Wife Who Contracted Leprosy

SAN FRANCISCO, May 15 (AP)—A 65-year-old army major tonight was striving strenuously to obtain permission to spend the rest of his life, if need be, at the leprosarium at Carville, La., with his wife who developed leprosy during the Japanese imprisonment they endured together.

"I'm 65 and I've had my fling at life," said Maj. Hans George Hornbostel, former magazine executive in Manila. "I want just one thing in the world—to be with my wife."

Added blue-eyed Mrs. Hornbostel, 55: "Hans is ready now to be retired from the service and he wants to be with me. And I want him to come."

Both Hornbostels believe that she contracted the disease while she voluntarily shared her husband's imprisonment at Cabanatuan and later at Santa Tomas in Manila during the Japanese invasion. She had rejected her German brother's offer to remain free of prison under his sponsorship.

Born of German parents in Switzerland, Mrs. Hornbostel met her husband, then a marine sergeant, in 1914 on Guam and married him there.

Only last week a board of three physicians certified the case to state and federal health services.

The eldest of the couple's three children, Earl, 31, a radio technician in New York, has been notified. Both daughters are in the Orient: Mrs. A. D. Stewart, wife of a Manila business executive, and Mrs. Eric Arriess, wife of an American President Lines passenger agent in Shanghai.

The silver-haired couple sat together today in the isolation ward of San Francisco hospital and unfolded in matter-of-fact recital their story of conjugal devotion.

Following their release in February, 1945, treatment in military hospitals both in Los Angeles and in New York failed to disclose the nature of the dry and peeling skin on Mrs. Hornbostel's palms and forearms. The Hornbostels, who had lived in the tropics for many years, were familiar with lepers and they insisted a culture be made of flesh tissues on the palms—already insensitive to pinpricks. The test confirmed their fears.

Dr. J. C. Geiger, San Francisco health director, who has visited Mrs. Hornbostel frequently at the hospital here, addressed appeals on the Hornbostels' behalf to Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon general of the United States. Many others here have also appealed to obtain their

Senate Group Moves To Outlaw Strikes by Government Workers

WASHINGTON, May 15 (AP) — A move to bar the door against strikes by government workers today was tossed into the midst of the Senate battle over general labor legislation.

It came from the Appropriations committee in a day bringing these other developments:

1. The Senate Labor committee approved a resolution for an investigation of the causes of labor disputes, including the "policies and practices" of unions and management.

2. Senators' aides passed the word that no voting is in prospect before next week on the general labor bill and proposed amendments aimed at curbing unions.

The Appropriations committee tacked onto the Agriculture department appropriations bill a clause forbidding employment by the department of anyone belonging to any organization which "asserts the right to strike against the government."

Sen. Russell (D-Ga) told reporters a similar provision would be added to all future appropriations bills. He said a new CIO government workers union, recently formed by merger of other unions, "claimed the right to strike and at the same time condemned the Americans and the British for imperialistic policies."

This group is the United Public Workers of America.

Russell said Sen. Ball (R-Minn) first proposed the anti-strike clause and that a subcommittee reworded it. It is a revision of a provision appropriations bills long have carried prohibiting employment of anarchists, Communists or anyone who seeks to "overthrow the government of the United States by force or violence."

Senators clamoring for enactment of legislation to curb strikes and otherwise regulate union activities viewed the Labor committee's resolution for an inquiry into basic causes for labor disputes as simply a device for stalling.

"It is just a method of delay,"

Vet, Charged with Murder, Admits He Struck Salesman with Bottle

NASHVILLE, TENN., May 15. (AP)—A slight, 26-year-old ex-GI related today that he struck a Baltimore shoe salesman with a whiskey bottle and kicked him down a fifty-foot embankment after a fight that began over his army discharge emblem.

"And that's all I remember until the next day," said John D. Taylor in an interview with reporters, including an Associated Press staff man, in State Safety Commissioner Lynn Bomar's office as state police officials listened.

A warrant has been sworn out at McEwen, Tenn., charging Taylor with murder of 49-year-old Arthur W. Hollstein last Sunday night.

Taylor asserted that Hollstein began "to curse and fuss at me" for not wearing a discharge button shortly after Hollstein picked him up as a hitchhiker near Jackson, Tenn.

Soon, he added, Hollstein stopped the car and hit him across the forehead with a pint whisky bottle Taylor said he then took the bottle and hit the salesman on the head three times and kicked him out of the car and down the embankment, near McEwen.

Then, he added, "I didn't know what was going on until I woke up in Nashville the next day" on the way to Knoxville.

He attributed the lapse of memory to the blow across his forehead, which showed no injury, and to other mental lapses he said he had suffered since shortly before leaving the army.

Taylor was treated at Kennedy General hospital in Memphis, he said, for a spine injury received on Luzon. The first of five mental lapses occurred in Memphis, he said, but he told no army doctors.

Shortly afterwards he was discharged last April 19, 1946.

State chemists today analyzed blood on two fist-sized rocks found near Hollstein's body as that of a human, and Bomar expressed the belief that they were the death weapons.

Secretary Anderson is known to be considering the possibility of diverting to the mills some wheat bought by the government for shipment overseas. While that would keep the mills grinding it, it would not necessarily increase flour for home consumption, since the finished products still might be exported.

The plight of the mills results from the fact that they were required on May 1 to cut wheat stocks to a twenty-one-day supply. Many have been unable to get wheat since because they can offer only the ceiling price for it while the government will pay farmers a bonus of thirty cents a bushel over the ceiling to obtain wheat to meet foreign commitments.

Caught in the squeeze, some millers already have quit operations.

Food Conditions Will Be Probed

Along with this development, the House Agriculture committee arranged to begin tomorrow a thorough investigation of both the domestic and world food conditions.

And from the weather bureau came reports that insects, diseases and bad weather continue to beset the winter wheat crop.

Train Carrying American Women and Children Is Fired On in Germany

FRANKFURT, Germany, May 15 (AP) — Two shots were fired last night at a trainload of American women and children on their way to join United States occupation soldiers in Germany, the army announced tonight. No one was injured.

The army, which kept the incident secret for twenty-three hours, said the shots struck an upper compartment of the train, which was en route from Bremerhaven to Frankfurt. The names of the occupants of the compartment were not disclosed.

Army authorities began an immediate investigation.

ODT-Operated Railroad Will Be Strike-Exempt

Precedent for Staying on Job if U. S. Seizes May Have Been Set

WASHINGTON, May 15. (AP)—Railroad engineers and trainmen who have scheduled a strike for Saturday may have set a precedent today for staying on the job if the government seizes the carriers.

Alvanley Johnson, chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, announced that a decision not to walk out on the Illinois Central line had been reached as "a safety measure."

Johnston refused to discuss reasons for the "safety measure," but the Illinois Central is technically operated by the Office of Defense Transportation as a result of a previous strike threat.

The engineers' leader would not say that government control of the line was the reason for the exemption, nor would he deny it.

Seizure of the nation's other rail carriers would create a national situation comparable to that on the Illinois Central.

President Truman has said he would not hesitate to seize the railroads in the event of a crippling strike.

"We thought it over," Johnston told a reporter, "and regard it (the Illinois Central exemption) as the thing to do at this time. It's the way it stands now. We can give it further consideration."

The Illinois Central development came during a lull in the negotiations over union demands on pay and working conditions. Only the engineers and trainmen have scheduled the Saturday strike, but other operating brotherhoods are moving toward a walkout.

Johnston said the conferences, begun last night, will be resumed at 10 a. m. tomorrow. He added

Six Sisters Whose Ages Average 74 Take Off On First Plane Ride

COLUMBUS, O., May 15 (AP)—Six Ohio sisters whose ages averaged 74 took off today for Louisville in a commercial airliner on their first plane ride.

As the plane was readied for flight, the elderly woman explained that they always got together for various birthdays and that this year they wanted to do "something different."

Occasion for the trip was the birthday of Fred Weber, Louisville, a son of the women.

Roads Commission Recommends Boost In State Gas Tax

BALTIMORE, May 15 (AP) — An increase in the Maryland gasoline tax was recommended to the legislative council today by the state roads commission.

In a memorandum prepared for submission to the council by Robert M. Reindollar, roads chairman, the commission said the full amount of the revenue from such a gasoline tax increase should go "to the state roads commission for the sole purpose of rehabilitating and extending the primary system of state highways."

The roads group said that in its opinion "there is an inequitable distribution of funds for highway purposes." It suggested that the council appoint a committee to study such distribution.

The commission asked also "complete authority to regulate traffic on the state highway system, including connecting roads through incorporated towns."

The group urged amendment of the statutes "relating to the collection of tolls on the Susquehanna and Potomac river bridges, after revenue bonds have been entirely redeemed or matured, so as to repay the (roads) commission the amount of total costs incurred in the operation of the bridges during the life of the bonds."

At an earlier session today, the council heard a complaint by the Maryland Classified Employers' Association that loopholes in state

Louisiana Court Lacks Authority To Save Negro

Attorney Says Youth "Must Not" Make Second Trip to Chair

NEW ORLEANS, May 15 (AP) — Louisiana's supreme court ruled today that it lacks authority to interfere with a second trip to the electric chair for Willie Francis, 18, negro, after the state failed in its first attempt to execute him for murder.

The justices held unanimously, in denying writs, that the court proceedings were entirely in order and that Francis is "in legal custody" of the St. Martin parish sheriff. In the first scheduled electrocution Francis emerged unharmed because the chair's equipment failed.

Attorneys said they would seek the only avenues of escape which remain — the state pardon board and the federal courts.

"My client must not go to the chair," said Bertrand De Blanc, St. Martinville lawyer. "Such physical torture would shock the good people of the country. I am planning to carry this case into the federal courts on the grounds of double jeopardy, cruel and unusual punishment and deprivation of life without due process of law."

De Blanc also declared that he would seek clemency from the pardon board, as did Attorneys A. T. Tureaud and Joseph A. Thornton.

The youthful Francis, sentenced to die for the robbery-killing of a St. Martinsville druggist, was held in the death cell of the New Iberia jail. A reprieve granted by Lt. Gov. Emile Verret to permit time for the supreme court action which failed today will expire June 7.

The supreme court held that it had no authority to set aside the order of execution, and that it also lacked authority to issue a commutation or pardon.

Francis was strapped into the state's portable electric chair at St. Martinsville May 3. The hood was placed over his head, and an executioner threw the switch. But nothing happened. A wire in the control box was loose, and no current coursed

U. S. Conciliators Halt Negotiations After Operators Reject Levy Plan

President Receives "No Progress" Report, Not Contract He Asked

Producers and Miners Will Resume Talks when Requested To Do So

WASHINGTON, May 15—(AP)—Deadlocked over John L. Lewis's demand for a seven per cent payroll levy, coal peace talks were broken off today and the negotiators went to the White House with empty hands instead of the signed contract requested by President Truman.

The president, after hearing their "no progress" report, told them to some back to the executive offices tomorrow morning for further conferences.

Government conciliators had stepped in and halted the negotiations between Lewis and the operators after the latter flatly rejected the program for a union-controlled health and welfare fund to be financed by the mine owners through a payroll levy.

The president had called for an agreement by today and the failure to reach it created some speculation of a new government move in the offing, to prevent a resumption of the soft coal strike on the expiration of the two weeks' truce on May 25. Reconversion Director John W. Snyder said that the president would take "every possible action."

Mr. Truman's conference with Lewis and Charles O'Neill, operators' spokesman, lasted forty minutes. Afterward Charles G. Ross, presidential secretary, told reporters "no progress was made toward a settlement."

Negotiators' Faces Are Solemn

He said he did not know whether the president had offered any proposal for the parties to study overnight.

O'Neill and Lewis, leaving the White House with solemn faces, had no comment beyond saying that they would be on hand tomorrow as the president had requested.

Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach, also a participant in the meeting, remained behind for a private conference with the president after Lewis and O'Neill departed. Later he said Mr. Truman and his advisers will decide after tomorrow's session whether it will be worth while to start up the negotiations again.

The only encouragement received from today's meeting, the secretary said, was that "it is worth while to bring them back tomorrow."

MAN, 74, ASKS DIVORCE FROM MISSING BRIDE, 16

HOUSTON, Mo., May 15 (AP) — T. W. Sutton, 74, asked a divorce today from his missing 16-year-old bride, saying he believed she had "left home with another man."

The petition named no other man.

She hasn't turned up at the nearby home of her mother nor in San Pablo, Calif., where her father, Frank L. Holden, who objected to the marriage, is a sawmill worker.

Senate Group Moves To Outlaw Strikes by Government Workers

WASHINGTON, May 15 (AP) — A move to bar the door against strikes by government workers today was tossed into the midst of the Senate battle over general labor legislation.

It came from the Appropriations committee in a day bringing these other developments:

1. The Senate Labor committee approved a resolution for an investigation of the causes of labor disputes, including the "policies and practices" of unions and management.

2. Senators' aides passed the word that no voting is in prospect before next week on the general labor bill and proposed amendments aimed at curbing unions.

The Appropriations committee tacked onto the Agriculture department appropriations bill a clause forbidding employment by the department of anyone belonging to any organization which "asserts the right to strike against the government."

Sen. Russell (D-Ga) told reporters a similar provision would be added to all future appropriations bills. He said a new CIO government workers union, recently formed by merger of other unions, "claimed the right to strike and at the same time condemned the Americans and the British for imperialistic policies."

This group is the United Public Workers of America.

Russell said Sen. Ball (R-Minn) first proposed the anti-strike clause and that a subcommittee reworded it. It is a revision of a provision appropriations bills long have carried prohibiting employment of anarchists, Communists or anyone who seeks to "overthrow the government of the United States by force or violence."

Senators clamoring for enactment of legislation to curb strikes and otherwise regulate union activities viewed the Labor committee's resolution for an inquiry into basic causes for labor disputes as simply a device for stalling.

"It is just a method of delay,"

Army Major Wants To Share Fate Of Wife Who Contracted Leprosy

SAN FRANCISCO, May 15 (AP)—A 65-year-old army major tonight was striving strenuously to obtain permission to spend the rest of his life, if need be, at the leprosarium at Carville, La., with his wife who developed leprosy during the Japanese imprisonment they endured together.

"I'm 65 and I've had my fling at life," said Maj. Hans George Hornbostel, former magazine executive in Manila. "I want just one thing in the world—to be with my wife."

Added blue-eyed Mrs. Hornbostel, 55: "Hans is ready now to be retired from the service and he wants to be with me. And I want him to come."

Both Hornbostels believe that she contracted the disease while she voluntarily shared her husband's imprisonment at Cabanatuan and later at Santa Tomas in Manila during the Japanese invasion. She had rejected her German brother's offer to remain free of prison under his sponsorship.

Born of German parents in Switzerland, Mrs. Hornbostel met her husband, then a marine sergeant, in 1914 on Guam and married him there.

Only last week a board of three physicians certified the case to state and federal health services.

The eldest of the couple's three children, Earl, 31, a radio technician in New York, has been notified. Both daughters are in the Orient: Mrs. A. D. Stewart, wife of a Manila business executive, and Mrs. Eric Arriess, wife of an American President Lines passenger agent in Shanghai.

The silver-haired couple sat together today in the isolation ward of San Francisco hospital and unfolded in matter-of-fact recital their story of conjugal devotion.

Following their release in February, 1945, treatment in military hospitals both in Los Angeles and in New York failed to disclose the nature of the dry and peeling skin on Mrs. Hornbostel's palms and forearms. The Hornbostels, who had lived in the tropics for many years, were familiar with lepers and they insisted a culture be made of flesh tissues on the palms—already insensitive to pinpricks. The test confirmed their fears.

Dr. J. C. Geiger, San Francisco health director, who has visited Mrs. Hornbostel frequently at the hospital here, addressed appeals on the Hornbostels' behalf to Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon general of the United States. Many others here have also appealed to obtain their

Security Council Will Take Up Secrecy Rule

NEW YORK, May 15 (AP) — A proposed rule which would permit the United Nations Security Council to keep its proceedings secret even from fellow members of the United Nations will come before the council tomorrow with strong indications it will be approved.

A report by the council's committee of experts embodying this proposal and a resolution proposed by the United States on procedure regarding new members are the only two items on the council's agenda.

There was no provision for discussion tomorrow of the Iranian situation.

Thus it is expected that Andrei A. Gromyko, Soviet delegate who refused to discuss Iran in the council and boycotted the last council meeting May 8, will attend.

Vet, Charged with Murder, Admits He Struck Salesman with Bottle

NASHVILLE, TENN., May 15. (AP)—A slight, 26-year-old ex-GI related today that he struck a Baltimore shoe salesman with a whiskey bottle and kicked him down a fifty-foot embankment after a fight that began over his army discharge emblem.

"And that's all I remember until the next day," said John D. Taylor in an interview with reporters, including an Associated Press staff man, in State Safety Commissioner Lynn Bomar's office as state police officials listened.

A warrant has been sworn out at McEwen, Tenn., charging Taylor with murder of 49-year-old Arthur W. Hollstein last Sunday night.

Taylor asserted that Hollstein began "to curse and fuss at me" for not wearing a discharge button shortly after Hollstein picked him up as a hitchhiker near Jackson, Tenn.

Soon, he added, Hollstein stopped the car and hit him across the forehead with a pint whisky bottle Taylor said he then took the bottle and hit the salesman on the head three times and kicked him out of the car and down the embankment, near McEwen.

Then, he added, "I didn't know what was going on until I woke up in Nashville the next day" on the way to Knoxville.

He attributed the lapse of memory to the blow across his forehead, which showed no injury, and to other mental lapses he said he had suffered since shortly before leaving the army.

Taylor was treated at Kennedy General hospital in Memphis, he said, for a spine injury received on Luzon. The first of five mental lapses occurred in Memphis, he said, but he told no army doctors.

Shortly afterwards he was discharged last April 19, 1946.

State chemists today analyzed blood on two fist-sized rocks found near Hollstein's body as that of a human, and Bomar expressed the belief that they were the death weapons.

MEADOWS REACHES MARTINSBURG; PLANS CONFERENCES TODAY

MARTINSBURG, W. Va., May 15 —(AP)—The "state capital" was moved to Martinsburg tonight, as Gov. Clarence W. Meadows and a party of more than twenty public officials arrived for a goodwill, get-together visit with Eastern Panhandle residents.

Meadows was the principal speaker at evening graduation ceremonies of nurses, from the King's Daughters Training school.

The governor and his department heads face a busy schedule tomorrow. The program includes individual conferences with citizens for Meadows and the various elective and appointive officers.

Traveling by automobile, the party broke the journey at noon with a stop in Elkins to attend a chamber of commerce luncheon.

Meadows, in a brief speech, took the opportunity to pay tribute to former Gov. Guy H. Kump, Elkins, in his home town.

"He came into office when courage was needed," Meadows said referring to Kump's election during the depression of the early 1930s, "and he measured up."

"His acts as governor have left an indelible imprint on West Virginia," Meadows added. Kump was unable to be present for the luncheon because of illness, and sent a letter of regret.

The search for Hollstein's body ranged the length of Tennessee for two days before state patrolmen on foot found it at the base of the embankment. They said he probably had been alive for two hours after he was left there.

Taylor, who was en route to visit relatives at Jellico, Tenn., was driving Hollstein's car in Knoxville when officers stopped him for a routine check and found blood in the car.

that both sides are due to report progress to Mr. Truman Friday.

A. F. Whitney, head of the trainmen, said the situation had changed virtually not at all since this morning's conferences when he reported the carriers were "not ready to submit anything to us.

The carrier representatives met for hours this afternoon before giving Whitney and Johnson the word that they were ready to start talking again tomorrow. Discussion with the other three operating brotherhoods will depend on the outcome of the talks with the two which have called the strike.

One carrier representative told newsmen that "some progress" had been made at the morning conference. Another management spokesman was less optimistic and said brotherhood representatives had stiffened their original demands.

Byrnes's proposal for a German peace conference, and it was expected the matter would be discussed further tomorrow.

American sources said there was immediate and complete agreement among the four powers on recessing the present meetings to June 15. The Russians, however, continued to object to setting any peace conference date as long as the major powers were not in agreement on the treaty drafts.

Byrnes Answers Soviet Arguments

Byrnes said the foreign ministers would give the world a bad impression if they failed to set a date for a peace conference. According to British informants, he added:

"We didn't hesitate to ask for assistance from other nations during the war, and we shouldn't hesitate to ask their views now."

Replying to Soviet arguments that twenty-one nations would not be able to agree on treaties if the four foreign ministers were unable to achieve an accord, Byrnes said the other nations should be invited to contribute their opinions on treaties and not merely be asked to ratify tests.

Molotov, according to British quarters, objected that this procedure would be contrary to decisions taken at the Moscow foreign ministers' meeting last December, and said that while the Soviet Union attached importance to the views of other nations the four powers had to agree among themselves on the texts first.

U. S. Concillators

The secretary said that the government had not submitted any proposals, but indicated that some move might be decided upon after the Thursday meeting.

While the parties were not given any proposition to consider tonight, Schwellenbach said that they would meet with their associates. He expressed the hope they would return with a more definite presentation of their position tomorrow.

Meetings Not "Fruitful"

Schwellenbach told reporters that the coal contract meetings in the Labor department which were called at his request April 29, "have not been fruitful."

"Whether or not the possibility of reopening the meetings at the department is worthy of further effort," is a question to be determined tomorrow by the officials who took part in today's White House talks.

Schwellenbach said there had been "no discussion" of government seizure of the mines up to now.

The recess in the negotiations was proposed by conciliators Edward F. McGrady and Paul W. Fuller. McGrady said he would not call the break in the operator-United Mine Workers talks a "collapse." There was no disposition among officials, however, to deny that a major impasse had been reached.

McGrady said both producers and miners had agreed to resume their talks when the conciliators call on them to do so. There was no statement of the reasons which prompted McGrady and Fuller to propose the delay. They went from the meeting to see Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach.

This afternoon's negotiations, which followed a recess after the operators' rejection of the Lewis demand, was held without participation by the UMW chieftain.

No Walkout on Negotiations

McGrady, however, as if to emphasize that the miners had not staged a walkout on the negotiations because of the operators' action, said that at today's sessions "we discussed several matters."

That was his reply to a question what would be the status of the negotiations when they are resumed.

The conciliator said Lewis now has submitted all of his specific demands except on wages and hours. He has made acceptance of the union welfare fund proposal a required preliminary to further negotiations. The operators called it "a large tax upon the industry and the public by a private enterprise, the United Mine Workers of America."

At his news conference, LaGuardia praised the objectives set forth in the report on world food conditions submitted to President Truman by former President Herbert Hoover.

While goals for April and May will not be met, LaGuardia was more hopeful for June. He said Hoover had estimated that UNRRA countries would require 685,000 tons of grain in that month, adding, "I'll settle for that and go down on my knees and thank God for these people if I can get it."

The charge against Ruess was filed in late April with the allegation that the action occurred in February. He was summoned to appear before the Moscow city prosecutor May 4.

He did not show up. The embassy argued to the foreign office that he was not subject to legal action of this sort. The Russians denied that he had diplomatic immunity and the embassy then demanded that the charge be dropped and that Ruess, who had been planning a trip home anyway, be given an exit visa.

That also was rejected by the Russians and the foreign office then issued a new summons for Reuss which the embassy again rejected. The state department backed the embassy fully.

Senate Group

Sen. Byrd (D-Va) commented to reporters.

But Chairman Murray (D-Mont), of the labor group, said he was undecided whether he would even attempt to bring the inquiry proposed up in the Senate before action on labor legislation. He said it would have to go to the Audit committee, which controls the Senate's spending, because of a provision for $50,000 for expenses of the investigation.

Sen. Byrd revised his amendment aimed to outlaw the United Mine Workers' demand for a welfare fund controlled by the union but paid by the mine operators.

Under his changes, employers could contribute to a welfare fund provided the employer had equal authority with the union over its spending. Byrd said the changes also would open the way for employers to contribute to such things as an employe baseball team. Pepper had charged the original draft would bar even that.

But Pepper contended the revised amendment still would upset half a dozen or more long-existing welfare funds of various unions.

employment regulations permit a state department head to work his employes on legal holidays without giving them extra credit for such work.

Albert W. Ward, secretary of the Maryland Tax Commission, is head of the association.

"At the present time," the association's prepared memorandum said, "the matter of state employes working on holidays is left entirely within the discretion of the particular department head.

"It is true that the board of public works has authorized the giving of appropriate extra vacation leave credit to an employe who works on a holiday x x x."

The association contended, however, that the rule requires certification of the holiday work be made on certain forms.

"This ruling contains so many loopholes," the group said, "that a department head who wishes to work his employes on a holiday without giving them extra credit for such work, can very easily do so by refusing or neglecting to use the (prescribed) forms.

"Thus, employes in one department might observe all legal holidays throughout the year...while those in the next department might be forced to work on all of these holidays without receiving extra credit or pay."

The association recommended a uniform holiday rule for state departments.

MEADOWS REACHES MARTINSBURG; PLANS CONFERENCES TODAY

MARTINSBURG, W. Va., May 15 —(AP)—The "state capital" was moved to Martinsburg tonight, as Gov. Clarence W. Meadows and a party of more than twenty public officials arrived for a goodwill, get-together visit with Eastern Panhandle residents.

Meadows was the principal speaker at evening graduation ceremonies of nurses, from the King's Daughters Training school.

The governor and his department heads face a busy schedule tomorrow. The program includes individual conferences with citizens for Meadows and the various elective and appointive officers.

Traveling by automobile, the party broke the journey at noon with a stop in Elkins to attend a chamber of commerce luncheon.

Meadows, in a brief speech, took the opportunity to pay tribute to former Gov. Guy H. Kump, Elkins, in his home town.

"He came into office when courage was needed," Meadows said referring to Kump's election during the depression of the early 1930s, "and he measured up."

"His acts as governor have left an indelible imprint on West Virginia," Meadows added. Kump was unable to be present for the luncheon because of illness, and sent a letter of regret.

The search for Hollstein's body ranged the length of Tennessee for two days before state patrolmen on foot found it at the base of the embankment. They said he probably had been alive for two hours after he was left there.

Taylor, who was en route to visit relatives at Jellico, Tenn., was driving Hollstein's car in Knoxville when officers stopped him for a routine check and found blood in the car.

that both sides are due to report progress to Mr. Truman Friday.

A. F. Whitney, head of the trainmen, said the situation had changed virtually not at all since this morning's conferences when he reported the carriers were "not ready to submit anything to us."

The carrier representatives met for hours this afternoon before giving Whitney and Johnson the word that they were ready to start talking again tomorrow. Discussion with the other three operating brotherhoods will depend on the outcome of the talks with the two which have called the strike.

One carrier representative told newsmen that "some progress" had been made at the morning conference. Another management spokesman was less optimistic and said brotherhood representatives had stiffened their original demands.

Byrnes's proposal for a German peace conference, and it was expected the matter would be discussed further tomorrow.

American sources said there was immediate and complete agreement among the four powers on recessing the present meetings to June 15. The Russians, however, continued to object to setting any peace conference date as long as the major powers were not in agreement on the treaty drafts.

Byrnes Answers Soviet Arguments

Byrnes said the foreign ministers would give the world a bad impression if they failed to set a date for a peace conference. According to British informants, he added:

"We didn't hesitate to ask for assistance from other nations during the war, and we shouldn't hesitate to ask their views now."

Replying to Soviet arguments that twenty-one nations would not be able to agree on treaties if the four foreign ministers were unable to achieve an accord, Byrnes said the other nations should be invited to contribute their opinions on treaties and not merely be asked to ratify tests.

Molotov, according to British quarters, objected that this procedure would be contrary to decisions taken at the Moscow foreign ministers' meeting last December, and said that while the Soviet Union attached importance to the views of other nations the four powers had to agree among themselves on the texts first.

The secretary said that the government had not submitted any proposals, but indicated that some move might be decided upon after the Thursday meeting.

While the parties were not given any proposition to consider tonight, Schwellenbach said that they would meet with their associates. He expressed the hope they would return with a more definite presentation of their position tomorrow.

Meetings Not "Fruitful"

Schwellenbach told reporters that the coal contract meetings in the Labor department which were called at his request April 29, "have not been fruitful."

"Whether or not the possibility of reopening the meetings at the department is worthy of further effort," is a question to be determined tomorrow by the officials who took part in today's White House talks.

Schwellenbach said there had been "no discussion" of government seizure of the mines up to now.

The recess in the negotiations was proposed by conciliators Edward F. McGrady and Paul W. Fuller. McGrady said he would not call the break in the operator-United Mine Workers talks a "collapse." There was no disposition among officials, however, to deny that a major impasse had been reached.

McGrady said both producers and miners had agreed to resume their talks when the conciliators call on them to do so. There was no statement of the reasons which prompted McGrady and Fuller to propose the delay. They went from the meeting to see Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach.

This afternoon's negotiations, which followed a recess after the operators' rejection of the Lewis demand, was held without participation by the UMW chieftain.

No Walkout on Negotiations

McGrady, however, as if to emphasize that the miners had not staged a walkout on the negotiations because of the operators' action, said that at today's sessions "we discussed several matters."

That was his reply to a question what would be the status of the negotiations when they are resumed.

The conciliator said Lewis now has submitted all of his specific demands except on wages and hours. He has made acceptance of the union welfare fund proposal a required preliminary to further negotiations. The operators called it "a large tax upon the industry and the public by a private enterprise, the United Mine Workers of America."

UNRRA Director

At his news conference, LaGuardia praised the objectives set forth in the report on world food conditions submitted to President Truman by former President Herbert Hoover.

While goals for April and May will not be met, LaGuardia was more hopeful for June. He said Hoover had estimated that UNRRA countries would require 685,000 tons of grain in that month, adding, "I'll settle for that and go down on my knees and thank God for these people if I can get it."

sians actually brought the charge against Ruess to counterbalance the American charge of espionage preferred against Soviet Naval Lt. Nicolai G. Redin.

The charge against Ruess was filed in late April with the allegation that the action occurred in February. He was summoned to appear before the Moscow city prosecutor May 4.

He did not show up. The embassy argued to the foreign office that he was not subject to legal action of this sort. The Russians denied that he had diplomatic immunity and the embassy then demanded that the charge be dropped and that Ruess, who had been planning a trip home anyway, be given an exit visa.

That also was rejected by the Russians and the foreign office then issued a new summons for Reuss which the embassy again rejected. The state department backed the embassy fully.

Senate Group

Sen. Byrd (D-Va) commented to reporters.

But Chairman Murray (D-Mont), of the labor group, said he was undecided whether he would even attempt to bring the inquiry proposed up in the Senate before action on labor legislation. He said it would have to go to the Audit committee, which controls the Senate's spending, because of a provision for $50,000 for expenses of the investigation.

Sen. Byrd revised his amendment aimed to outlaw the United Mine Workers' demand for a welfare fund controlled by the union but paid by the mine operators.

Under his changes, employers could contribute to a welfare fund provided the employer had equal authority with the union over its spending. Byrd said the changes also would open the way for employers to contribute to such things as an employe baseball team. Pepper had charged the original draft would bar even that.

But Pepper contended the revised amendment still would upset half a dozen or more long-existing welfare funds of various unions.

employment regulations permit a state department head to work his employes on legal holidays without giving them extra credit for such work.

Albert W. Ward, secretary of the Maryland Tax Commission, is head of the association.

"At the present time," the association's prepared memorandum said, "the matter of state employes working on holidays is left entirely within the discretion of the particular department head.

"It is true that the board of public works has authorized the giving of appropriate extra vacation leave credit to an employe who works on a holiday x x x."

The association contended, however, that the rule requires certification of the holiday work be made on certain forms.

"This ruling contains so many loopholes," the group said, "that a department head who wishes to work his employes on a holiday without giving them extra credit for such work, can very easily do so by refusing or neglecting to use the (prescribed) forms.

"Thus, employes in one department might observe all legal holidays throughout the year, while those in the next department might be forced to work on all of these holidays without receiving extra credit or pay."

The association recommended a uniform holiday rule for state departments.

Excess of Salt May Contribute To Sleeplessness

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

The body may be compared to a wonderfully equipped laboratory where the most complicated chemical reactions are carried out automatically. Starches are changed to sugar; the glands of internal secretion manufacture powerful drugs; the stomach secretes hydrochloric acid.

While life endures these and hundreds of other such processes continue endlessly and with an amazing precision. Once in a while, however, something in the long process of maintaining the body's chemical balance goes off and when it does you get trouble of one kind or another.

Salt Content

Studies made of the salt content of the brains of certain mental patients have disclosed an excessive amount of one of the component parts of salt, chloride. This discovery led doctors to wonder if ordinary nervousness might not be related to a similar, though less extreme, condition.

It was found that certain patients who had been sleeping only an hour or two a night were greatly benefitted within three weeks when they were given a diet low in salt, containing considerable amounts of leafy vegetables and potatoes, since the natural content of salt in these foods is limited.

More Relaxed

Of course, the human body must have some salt and this was supplied in the form of salt pills. It was found that, day by day, patients who were treated in this way became more and more relaxed, while formerly they were easily upset by slight emotional disturbances. They became less irritable and began to sleep eight hours a night and awake refreshed.

Some of the patients also noted that dreams which disturbed their sleep disappeared. Several also began to feel drowsy in the afternoon and began to experience the tiredness that comes from hard work. It would seem also that there was an improvement in the general mood of the patients and they were able to concentrate better.

Under Physician

Of course, treatment of this sort must be carried out under the directions of a physician, because the body must have a certain amount of salt, and if there is too great a decrease in the intake, severe symptoms may result. Furthermore, such treatment would not appear advisable in the summer months when salt is lost from the body in perspiration. Some salt is needed to avoid the symptoms of heat exhaustion.

Many people who suffer from sleeplessness get into the habit of taking sedative drugs and eventually this may lead to habit formation. Then, too, there are many things which may contribute to sleeplessness that can be simply eliminated.

Too Hot or Cold

For example, a person may sleep badly because he has too hot or too cold a room or because he is suffering from some ache or pain that interferes with normal sleep. Eating before bedtime may cause sleeplessness in some persons.

If, after a careful study by a physician, no cause for the sleeplessness can be found it would appear that the low salt diet might well be employed.

The Neutrality Of Senator Tydings

SENATOR TYDINGS has gone neutral or "hands off" as far as Senator Radcliffe's fight for renomination is concerned, according to an article by N. T. Kenney in the "Baltimore Evening Sun" sent to it from Washington where he is a member of the "Evening Sun" bureau.

The junior senator allegedly accepted his colleague's decision with good grace but made it clear that the long alliance between the two men had been broken by Tydings and not by himself, and, according to the article, friends of Radcliffe are bitter about it, noting that even if Tydings himself is neutral many of his friends and political allies have not only been permitted but perhaps even encouraged to campaign hard for Governor O'Conor.

Now what is the explanation for this split of two senatorial buddies? There must be some strong underlying reason, and Kenney tells just what it is. No matter what his plans are for the future, he states, "Senator Tydings could hardly afford to criticize Governor O'Conor, who, by virtue of his official position, heads the state-wide Democratic political organization."

Furthermore, "formation of the current Tydings-Curran alliance made it even more out of the question for Mr. Tydings to oppose the governor. Mr. Curran, who owes his post as attorney general to the governor, is thoroughly loyal to him, despite his personal friendship for Senator Radcliffe, and could hardly have retained Senator Tydings as a working partner had the senator placed himself on record as against Mr. Curran's patron.

"Therefore, Senator Tydings chose what appeared to him to be the best course under the circumstances and stayed neutral. He has made no announcement of his neutrality, apparently seeking to divert attention from himself, in connection with this situation, as much as possible."

Of course, Senator Tydings has a perfect right to repudiate an old friend and colleague, to be neutral in the latter's bid for renomination or to be actively for or against him as he sees fit. He has some plans for the future, however, according to Kenney. He has an ambition to go to a Democratic national convention with the state delegation safely and solidly in his pocket and possibly wind up as a serious candidate for vice president of the United States.

But, where do Republicans have any business nibbing into this situation, it being something on the other side of the political fence with which on the surface they should have little or nothing to do. Yet Republicans and citizens of the state generally do have an interest in it for the situation it reveals and emphasizes. That is the existence of an all-powerful Democratic state machine, which is so influential that candidates for party nominations do not dare to oppose it or to interfere in any way with its smooth operation, as the stand by Senator Tydings well demonstrates.

Perpetuation of that all-powerful, long-entrenched political machine is of concern to Republicans of Maryland and it should be also to many Democrats who have become sick and tired of its ruthless domination. It has been so built up over the years and so fortified with political plums and governmental expenditures that it has become too selfish, arrogant and overbearing for the good of the state. Wherefore, it is up to these people to reform that condition, turn out this domineering instrumentality and so put an end to its manipulations, including its virtual suppression of free thought and speech among any who should have the temerity to offend it, as a move for better government and enhancement of the state welfare in general.

That will be a pretty tough job, indeed, but the signs are multiplying that, from the forthcoming Republican primaries, leaders will emerge who are not only well equipped for the job but who will command the support of the voters in general to such an extent that there will be a radical change among the army of those who have for so long waxed sleek and fat at the Maryland public crib.

The Strike Record Speaks for Itself

THE RECORD speaks for itself respecting the question whether something is inherently wrong with the Wagner Labor Relations law. Some legislation was needed when that law was enacted and it should have been sensibly revised from time to time when its defects were manifested. It was heralded as an effective instrumentality for reducing strikes, but the law as unrevised has not produced the results claimed for it.

During the seven years prior to the passage of the Wagner act this country had 8,071 strikes affecting 1,416,690 workers, who lost 101,278,198 man days. The average number of strikes a year was 1,009. Patently remedial legislation was needed.

But, during the ten years since the Wagner act was passed, there have been 37,386 strikes affecting 13,827,305 workers who lost 175,796,235 man days. The average number of strikes each year was 3,398.

Thus, strikes under the Wagner act, instead of decreasing as it was predicted and hoped, increase 237 per cent and 177 per cent more workers were affected.

So it is evident that something is radically wrong with the machinery of mediation. Strikes are justified only under the most extreme provocation but the trend toward them has long since ignored that restraining aspect and power-drunk, misguided labor leaders call them at will regardless of the national welfare.

Under the existing labor relations situation, this nation is losing its source of strength, which is production. It is obviously up to Congress to seek a solution in the national interest, which will be fair to both labor and management, in spite of threats from the pressure groups.

A Silver Spring Building Project

THE CURRENT ISSUE of the "Silver Spring Post" carries an interesting article with an architect's drawing of a modern million-dollar building planned for that community.

With Indiana limestone and black alberene, the structure will contain ninety office suites, twelve store rooms and, in the central section, a theater auditorium with a seating capacity of 1,100. Two elevators will carry passengers to the upper levels of its central five-story section.

The average size of the offices will be 14 by 20 feet with partitions built according to tenants' specifications. Stores will average 20 by 100 feet. Modern display windows will face a twelve-foot pavement sidewalk. Large full-size glass doors will feature entrances on the main street and a double winding stairway will lead to an area for a rathskeller on the lower level. A wide stairway of aluminum and glass will permit large groups to progress from the upper levels without confusion.

The drawing is attractive. The project may be only a dream, but apparently it is something of a definite nature since it is stated that the designs have all been prepared. Anyway, it betokens a spirit of progress in a progressive and rapidly-growing community of the state.

The announcement is not without interest here because Cumberland could well use something of the kind.

Another Discounting Faces Oil Depletion

A FEW YEARS FROM NOW atomic-age techniques may make possible the conversion of sea-bottom mud into petroleum. This startling statement comes from the American Chemical Society. It is merely additional proof of how foolish it is to make grave predictions about American oil resources.

Much of the oil that is being used today could have been drawn from the earth a generation ago, when a petroleum famine in twenty-five years was predicted. But scientists and the petroleum industry have always succeeded in pushing the prognosticators out on a limb and sawing it off. Eventually the prophets of oil exhaustion may give up.

Scientists are developing the theory that crude oil is formed by the radioactive transformation of organic substances. They are duplicating in the laboratory the radioactive process that may reveal how nature, over a period of ten million years, accomplishes the conversion of protoplasm, proteins, fats and other materials into oil.

The new attitude seems to be to make fullest use of the resources available today in the belief tomorrow will take care of itself—if scientists and industry are permitted to function freely.

Mrs. Tony Factor, wife of the golf pro at Elwood City, Pa., Country Club, complained that she hadn't been able to open a kitchen window for eight years, but the other night a burglar pried the window loose, climbed in and stole $705. Thus again is the Scriptural injunction verified that Heaven is the only place where thieves do not break in and steal.

An American man should view the spring hats with a feeling of pride that his country can get along in millinery without Paris, a commentator states. But is "pride" the exact word?

The college boys who formerly swallowed goldfish as a joke may soon be forced to include the custom in their serious eating.

This is the Year of the Dog, according to the Chinese calendar, which seems to have something there.

Russian Stricture Of News Is Viewed As Hurting Amity

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, May 15—Many are the observers of the passing scene which write in and say that the Russian viewpoint isn't being adequately presented in world affairs or that the American press is emphasizing friction between Russia and the United States. But these friends of Russia do not know how difficult it is for the newspapers of the United States to get information out of Moscow.

Admittedly the "New York Times," for instance, is a great newspaper and a fair and objective publication. Yet the publisher of the "Times," Arthur Hays Sulzberger, in a report in the current issue of "Editor and Publisher," makes this significant revelation:

"We've striven and are constantly striving to get more correspondents into Russia. Brooks Atkinson, present Moscow correspondent for the Times', took six months and a personal cable to Stalin to get in. Drew Middleton, who is about to replace him, had his application for a visa for his passport pending more than a year.

"Why there should be so much difficulty, I don't know. We sought to have more than one man in Moscow. It was forbidden. We were recently told we were unfriendly and certain news stories were quoted as a sample of this. We were told there was a news bureau where stories could be checked for accuracy. The first story that was submitted was neither confirmed nor denied.

Important in News

"I think that Russia, the great country that it is, is the most important news story in the world. I wish we could put half a dozen men there and give you all the news.

"I still believe that freedom of access to the news is the sine qua non of peace because peace will come only with understanding, and somehow or other we've got to raise that iron curtain. I do not think it can be done by force. I do not think you can flood people on the other side with propoganda, but instead it can be done by the normal flow of news which is established by our sending correspondents there and their sending correspondents here and the normal wire service."

The "New York Times" isn't the only newspaper that has difficulty getting correspondents into Russia. The "Chicago Sun," owned by Marshall Field and a publication which is known to be friendly to Russia, has had several months' delay in trying to get a correspondent into Moscow. Other newspapers report the same kind of difficulty.

Answer Not Known

What is the answer? Nobody in Washington seems to know. Our government tries to use its good offices to get correspondents into Russia but without avail. The United States government has been urged to limit the number of Russian officials or agents who are coming into the United States until some understanding is reached with respect to the sending in of Americans to Russia.

Plainly there is a wide gulf between the two governments. The usual explanation made is that the governments are suspicious of one another or that communism doesn't trust capitalism or vice versa. But the American people and the Russian people, no matter what their economic systems may be, have a friendly feeling for one another. Gen. Eisenhower, for example, has told correspondents here of the fraternal conversations he has with Russian officers and there is no question in his mind about the desire of the Russian army men to develop closer relations with the Americans.

Cleavages Cause War Talk

Yet, in spite of these trends, there are difficulties. There are cleavages which actually make some people here talk in terms of possible war with Russia some day. There would not be the slightest basis for such speculative gossip except for the constant clashes in conferences between the governments and the refusal of the Russians to let the American people get closer to them, which would be the case if restrictions on the entry of the press into Russia and censorship were removed.

One explanation of the Russian policy of secrecy sometimes advanced here is that the Russians really are afraid to let the outside world know the true conditions under which the Russian populace lives for fear that communism would be hurt in the eyes of the outside world. Whether or not this is true, the Russians could meet such criticism readily by allowing more correspondents into their country to report the great progress which has been made since the days of the czars' regime.

A SUGGESTION FROM THE FISH

THE WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Secret Russian Radio Plant in Pentagon Building Is Closed, Pearson Discloses

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The War department is now closing down one of the most unique wartime arrangements ever made involving another country—a Russian radio station located right inside the Pentagon building.

Lifting of wartime secrecy now makes it possible to tell the inside story of this Russian radio transmitter.

Shortly after the USA and the USSR became allies, the Soviet embassy complained that it was not able to communicate to Moscow. Apparently the embassy did not trust American or British communications channels. Moreover, under the Federal Communications act it is illegal for any foreign country to operate a radio transmitter in the United States. Receiving sets can be used, but not sending.

When this problem was placed before President Roosevelt, he decided to cut red tape—and the law—by establishing a Russian radio station right inside the War department. Technically this was still illegal; but when located inside the Pentagon building no one knew about the transmitter except the army, and it was sworn to military secrecy.

Therefore the Russians were given a special section of the Pentagon building which they alone controlled. Russian guards policed this section night and day. No American was allowed inside. A total of seventy Russian officers and men staffed this extra-territorial area. It was as if a small section of American soil were set aside, subject to Soviet jurisdiction and law.

This arrangement has continued since the war—up until this week, when the Russian radio transmitter is supposed to close down.

Truman Ladies and Protocol

Probably the president don't know too much about it, but Mrs. Truman and daughter Margaret poked a finger into the State department the other day and tried to tell Secretary James Byrnes how he should run one phase of American diplomacy. They wanted a special friend of theirs, Stanley Woodward, appointed chief of protocol.

The man who holds this job orbitrates where visiting bigwigs, cabinet ladies and supreme court justices shall sit at official dinners. It was created about the time Dolly Gann and Alice Longworth began vying with each other as to which should precede the other at dinner; and, while the job at first was not considered important, Jimmy Dunn, the first protocol officer, proved that its close social connections could be of value when they eventually hoisted him to assistant secretary of state.

Secretary Byrnes had planned to appoint efficient Allan Dawson as chief of protocol, replacing retiring George T. Summerlin. In fact, Byrnes had even drafted a message to Montevideo, where Dawson is serving in the American embassy, telling him of his appointment. But suddenly he got a call from the White House.

Presidential Secretary Matt Connelly was on the phone, saying that President Truman wanted charming Stanley Woodward to be chief of protocol.

Irked at being told who should get a relatively routine job, Byrnes asked Connelly why the president wanted Woodward. Connelly finally confessed that Margaret and Mrs. Truman had taken a fancy to him. As assistant chief of protocol, he had helped out on various White House dinners.

Now Byrnes is on the spot between a commitment he had already made and the ladies of the Truman family.

OPA Fight Backfires

A hot fight is brewing inside the National Retail Dry Goods Association, which has been spearheading the kill-OPA drive. Powerful members, including the R. H. Macy Company, New York, and the City Store chain, are out to oust President Benjamin Namm and Executive Secretary Lew Hahn as a result of their back-stage lobbying in Congress, especially with Congressman Fred Hartley, of New Jersey.

The story goes back several months, to an NRDGA meeting in which the entire question of OPA was discussed. Namm, head of a Brooklyn department store, and Hahn argued for a strong drive against the price agency, while a powerful bloc within the association favored the price control principal but wanted administrative OPA changes.

Finally a compromise was reached, with Namm and Hahn given the green light to go ahead with a drive for changes in the pricing administration to wipe out "inequities."

Namm, however, is a good friend of industrialist Victor Emanuel, godfather of Truman's close friend RFC Commissioner George Allen. Emanuel is also a power in Republic Steel, the Aviation Corporation of America and the National Association of Manufacturers—which has been calling for the complete abolition of OPA. Friends say that it was Emanuel who finally convinced Namm that the National Retail Dry Goods Association should get behind the NAM drive.

Because of the membership vote, Namm never quite dared call for the complete abolition of OPA, but he did throw NRDGA support behind a number of amendments which, in their practical effect, mean the end of OPA.

In addition, he hired the Hill & Knowlton public relations agency to plan the NRDGA campaign. It is significant that Hill & Knowlton also handle public relations for Aviation Corporation and Republic Steel, two of the Emanuel enterprises.

The campaign was extremely successful in the House—in fact, too successful. Pressure from the buying public on NRDGA members became heavy enough to worry them. In addition, the moderates such as Macy's, Neiman-Marcus in Dallas, and Jelleff's in Washington, remember all too well what happened after the last war.

As a result even Namm and Hahn are now worried by the Frankenstein monster they helped build—the House OPA bill, and Congressman Hartley, of New Jersey, their chief spokesman in Congress, has begun to change his tune.

Note—The National Association of Manufacturers, however, hasn't changed. Tomorrow it will play luncheon host at the Waldorf Astoria for the American agriculture editors who expect to get a good "education" on price control.

Merry-Go-Round

If all the food served in farewell dinners to Lord Halifax had been shipped to Europe it would have fed about one medium-sized city. Of course the British ambassador couldn't decline the formality of going through these farewell dinners without being impolite, but he might have suggested to his hostesses that they curtail the swanky food. At the lush dinner given him by ex-Ambassador Joe Davies and his wife, (who is head of General Foods), his Lordship didn't hesitate to decree that the dinner should begin at the unheard hour of 6:30. He wanted to get home early. . . . Secretary of the Treasury Fred Vinson came away from the Davies-Halifax dinner a very dour man. He lost $63 at bridge. Furthermore, he lost to his cabinet colleague Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson. Only man in Washington who plays better bridge than Anderson is General Eisenhower, though Brazilian Ambassador Martins tries hard. . . . Important New York political medicine was hatched while President Truman spoke at Fordham university. He will back Senator Mead for governor—despite Jim Farley; also favors Fiorello LaGuardia for senator despite Fiorello's Republican background.

Pennsylvanians Battle

Labor leaders and capital political observers are watching with interest a Pennsylvania primary battle where one of the Labor department's most widely touted conciliators, James F. Dewey, is running for Congress.

Around Washington, Dewey is called 'Puddler Jim Davis II" after the ex-senator from Pennsylvania who originally sponsored him in the Labor department and whose dress and mannerisms he affects. Dewey long has been a familiar sight around Washington hotel lobbies, his hair waving, his necktie flowing, doing his Puddler Jim act.

Some time ago Jim Dewey left the Labor department's Conciliation Service to work for Briggs Bodies and other private concerns, then suddenly came back to the government to conciliate the General Motors strike.

Old friends asked Jim what he was doing back conciliating, to which he replied: "Well, I need some publicity. I'm going to run for Congress."

No one really quite took this seriously, but anyway Jim certainly got his publicity. The General Motors strike dragged on for weeks, with Dewey's name in the newspaper almost every day. Sometimes the publicity wasn't too favorable, such as when Al Frederico, of Flint, Mich., head of the Buick local of United Auto Workers, demanded of President Truman that Dewey be removed.

It was at about this time that Dewey hastened to Washington and finally succeeded in allaying the misgivings of Secretary Schwellenbach, who also considered removing him.

Allied with McClure

However, Jim Dewey apparently meant what he said when he told friends he was going to run for Congress. For he is now back in Chester, Pa., running for the Republican nomination in Delaware county or the Seventh district.

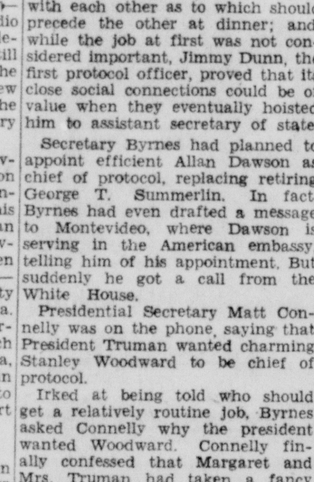

This county is controlled by one of the most notorious Republican machines in the country, whose boss, John J. McClure, was sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary for a giant bootleg conspiracy but was saved from serving his sentence when prohibition ended.

In some mysterious manner, Jim Dewey has formed an alliance with the McClure machine, and they are now spending thousands of dollars featuring his name on billboards all over the district. Who is putting up the money, nobody knows. It's a big mystery. But everyone does know that ordinarily the McClure machine doesn't go to town unless it is decidedly worth while.

Some people conclude that perhaps McClure finally has figured that the way to win votes is to get labor support and that Dewey is a made-to-order stalking horse for labor. Anyway the alliance is there and it's one of the most interesting in the turbulent politics of Pennsylvania.

Curiosity

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

Behind most of the great discoveries and inventions of all time has been this almost divine element of curiosity. The child's first outward actions are those of curiosity. Everything about it is new. Its urge is to learn, to find out.

And that is what has always been man's great urge—to get below the surface of things, and to find out the secret of things. This curiosity is a wonderful asset to anyone. It is creative. It gives incentive. It keeps enlarging one's knowledge. It can even lead to the discovery of one's self.

Curiosity may sometimes get us into trouble, but oftener it opens up new paths to thought and helps to reveal many a mystery. Curiosity is what has created our greatest scientists, and naturalists. Every day they delve into the unknown. But the more they delve the more they discover that much is useful to further progress in knowledge and interest.

It was the Wright's curiosity that spurred them to their attempts at flying. It was Newton's curiosity that made him think, as he noted an apple fall from the tree. It was curiosity that drove on Columbus. All experiments are banked with curiosity.

We are fascinated by people, because there is so much in each one to discover, and we are curious as to what each embodies, in mind, heart, and character. No other study is so thrilling as the study of people. In all the billions born, not a single one exacty the same! Why shouldn't their study be interesting and absorbing?

The scientist works with his microscope with the greatest of interest, for his curiosity is aroused at every step in his investigation. It's curiosity that largely influences one to take up a hobby. It's largely the search that produces the greatest joy.

A man, who builds up a business is always curious as to the methods used by his competitors. And he is curious about any experiment that may add to his own methods. It's curiosity that keeps driving us all ahead, unconsciously! My friend, George Stimpson, has just had published "A Book About a Thousand Things". He says he wrote it to "satisfy my curiosity."

It Says Here

By BOB HOPE

So far not much progress has been made in the coal strike, and it is easy to understand why John L. Lewis is being so independent during the negotiations. After all, he doesn't have to worry about keeping warm when he goes to bed at night. He can just pull his eyebrows down over his toes.

Of course, in Washington, D. C., they don't have much trouble keeping warm either. If things get too bad they just open the door to Congress and let the hot air take it from there.

A lot of businessmen in the East are having to work only from 2 to 5 in the afternoon because they have no way to keep warm in their offices, but of course some of them have secretaries.

The coal shortage is really confusing to the comedians in the East. They can't tell whether their acts are going over or the audience is just trying to keep its hands warm.

But the people who are building new homes in the East have found an answer to the coal shortage. Instead of installing fireplaces they are just pinning pictures of Jane Russell on the wall.

But I have inside information that those 400,000 miners aren't really striking. . . . It's just that they lent the little candle on their hats to Crosby for his birthday cake.

Truce Is a Regular Lewis Technique, Mark Sullivan Says

By MARK SULLIVAN

To suppose that anything permanently worthwhile will result from the twelve-day truce in the coal strike, which Mr. John L. Lewis granted, would be a triumph of optimism over sad experience. To grant truces is Mr. Lewis's technique—he manages strikes on the installment plan. In 1941 he began a strike in September, granted a thirty-day truce, renewed the strike, again granted a truce, and again renewed the strike and kept it up until he got what he had demanded.

It was during that off-again-on-again strike that President Roosevelt wrote one of the most remarkable letters ever written by a head of government to a private citizen: "For the third time, your government through me asks you . . . to authorize an immediate resumption of mining." Mr. Lewis continued the strike.

Closed Shop Won

It was during that same strike that President Roosevelt wrote another letter, likewise remarkable, considering the outcome. Mr. Lewis's demand was for a closed shop in some five per cent of the mines which did not have it. About Mr. Lewis's demand, President Roosevelt wrote: "I tell you frankly that the government of the United States will not order, nor will Congress pass, legislation ordering a so-called closed shop...The government will never compel this five per cent to join the union by government decree..." Nevertheless Mr. Lewis, after prolonged and sensational bullying, got his closed shop.

No, forget the coal truce. The only cure is to remove the condition which makes it possible for Mr. Lewis and other labor leaders to do what they do. That condition is, power confirmed on labor leaders and unions by existing laws—especially the Wagner Labor Relations act, as that act has been interpreted and enforced. For curing that, the only way is legislation by Congress.

Such legislation has started. The Case bill has passed the House. It is now before the Senate. And the thing that is important is what the Senate does.

Issue May Be Dodged

The Senate can amend the Case bill, weaken it or strengthen it—in short, write whatever labor measure expresses the view of a majority of the Senate. Or, conceivably the Senate might do nothing at all.

There may still be some possibility of this. A group of senators has for several years opposed legislation which would restrict the power of labor leaders and unions. The group is not large. But members of it make up a majority of the committee on labor, which is powerful on matters in this field. In the present situation, that committee had a proposal of postponement. As it was put early last week, before the Senate moved to take up the Case bill, by Senator Morse, of Oregon: "I should like to say that the committee on labor now has under consideration a proposal for...a three-man subcommittee to make an intensvie study and investigation regarding what legislation, if any, should be reported to this Congress at the beginning of the next session."

Study and investigation? It is tenable to estimate that committees of the House and Senate have given more time to hearings on labor than to any other subject of proposed legislation in all Congress's history. Congress knows the fact. Knowing the facts, a majority of Congress has been ready, even eager, to pass legislation any time during the past nine years ever since the sit-down strike of 1937. What has frustrated this wish is shown by one example.

Example in 1941

In December 1941 the House passed a bill much like the present Case one, by an immense majority, 252 to 136. A majority of Democrats voted for it and a majority of Republicans voted for it. The bill went to the Senate, and from there to the committee on labor. From that committee it never emerged.

The smothering of that bill in the Senate committee on labor and Senate inaction upon similar bills, conformed to and was inspired by the Roosevelt administration. "It is a truthful commonplace," wrote Mr. Ernest Lindley in 1941, "that only the resistance of the administration has blocked legislation curbing the right to strike."

In the present situation, President Truman may oppose the Case bill, but he has no such weight with Congress as President Roosevelt had. Today, opposition to the Case bill, depends largely on what strength can be mustered by C.I.O., its Political Action Committee, and affiliated groups. They are very determined and, before the Senate moved to take up the Case bill, were vigorously active in bringing about pressure to prevent Senate consideration of the bill.

The Neutrality Of Senator Tydings

SENATOR TYDINGS has gone neutral or "hands off" as far as Senator Radcliffe's fight for renomination is concerned, according to an article by N. T. Kenney in the "Baltimore Evening Sun" sent to it from Washington where he is a member of the "Evening Sun" bureau.

The junior senator allegedly accepted his colleague's decision with good grace but made it clear that the long alliance between the two men had been broken by Tydings and not by himself, and, according to the article, friends of Radcliffe are bitter about it, noting that even if Tydings himself is neutral many of his friends and political allies have not only been permitted but perhaps even encouraged to campaign hard for Governor O'Conor.

Now what is the explanation for this split of two senatorial buddies? There must be some strong underlying reason, and Kenney tells just what it is. No matter what his plans are for the future, he states, "Senator Tydings could hardly afford to criticize Governor O'Conor, who, by virtue of his official position, heads the state-wide Democratic political organization."

Furthermore, "formation of the current Tydings-Curran alliance made it even more out of the question for Mr. Tydings to oppose the governor. Mr. Curran, who owes his post as attorney general to the governor, is thoroughly loyal to him, despite his personal friendship for Senator Radcliffe, and could hardly have retained Senator Tydings as a working partner had the senator placed himself on record as against Mr. Curran's patron.

"Therefore, Senator Tydings chose what appeared to him to be the best course under the circumstances and stayed neutral. He has made no announcement of his neutrality, apparently seeking to divert attention from himself, in connection with this situation, as much as possible."

Of course, Senator Tydings has a perfect right to repudiate an old friend and colleague, to be neutral in the latter's bid for renomination or to be actively for or against him as he sees fit. He has some plans for the future, however, according to Kenney. He has an ambition to go to a Democratic national convention with the state delegation safely and solidly in his pocket and possibly wind up as a serious candidate for vice president of the United States.

But, where do Republicans have any business nibbing into this situation, it being something on the other side of the political fence with which on the surface they should have little or nothing to do. Yet Republicans and citizens of the state generally do have an interest in it for the situation it reveals and emphasizes. That is the existence of an all-powerful Democratic state machine, which is so influential that candidates for party nominations do not dare to oppose it or to interfere in any way with its smooth operation, as the stand by Senator Tydings well demonstrates.

Perpetuation of that all-powerful, long-entrenched political machine is of concern to Republicans of Maryland and it should be also to many Democrats who have become sick and tired of its ruthless domination. It has been so built up over the years and so fortified with political plums and governmental expenditures that it has become too selfish, arrogant and overbearing for the good of the state. Wherefore, it is up to these people to reform that condition, turn out this domineering instrumentality and so put an end to its manipulations, including its virtual suppression of free thought and speech among any who should have the temerity to offend it, as a move for better government and enhancement of the state welfare in general.

That will be a pretty tough job, indeed, but the signs are multiplying that, from the forthcoming Republican primaries, leaders will emerge who are not only well equipped for the job but who will command the support of the voters in general to such an extent that there will be a radical change among the army of those who have for so long waxed sleek and fat at the Maryland public crib.

The Strike Record Speaks for Itself

THE RECORD speaks for itself respecting the question whether something is inherently wrong with the Wagner Labor Relations law. Some legislation was needed when that law was enacted and it should have been sensibly revised from time to time when its defects were manifested. It was heralded as an effective instrumentality for reducing strikes, but the law as unrevised has not produced the results claimed for it.

During the seven years prior to the passage of the Wagner act this country had 8,071 strikes affecting 1,416,690 workers, who lost 101,278,198 man days. The average number of strikes a year was 1,009. Patently remedial legislation was needed.

But during the ten years since the Wagner act was passed, there have been 37,386 strikes affecting 6,827,306 workers who lost 175,236,235 man days. The average number of strikes each year was 3,398.

Thus, strikes under the Wagner act, instead of decreasing as it was predicted and hoped, increase 237 per cent and 177 per cent more workers were affected.

So it is evident that something is radically wrong with the machinery of mediation. Strikes are justified only under the most extreme provocation but the trend toward them has long since ignored that restraining aspect and power-drunk, misguided labor leaders call them at will regardless of the national welfare.

Under the existing labor relations situation, this nation is losing its source of strength, which is production. It is obviously up to Congress to seek a solution in the national interest, which will be fair to both labor and management, in spite of threats from the pressure groups.

A Silver Spring Building Project

THE CURRENT ISSUE of the "Silver Spring Post" carries an interesting article with an architect's drawing of a modern million-dollar building planned for that community.

With Indiana limestone and black alberene, the structure will contain ninety office suites, twelve store rooms and, in the central section, a theater auditorium with a seating capacity of 1,100. Two elevators will carry passengers to the upper levels of its central five-story section.

The average size of the offices will be 14 by 20 feet with partitions built according to tenants' specifications. Stores will average 20 by 100 feet. Modern display windows will face a twelve-foot pavement sidewalk. Large full-size glass doors will feature entrances on the main street and a double winding stairway will lead to an area for a rathskeller on the lower level. A wide stairway of aluminum and glass will permit large groups to progress from the upper levels without confusion.

The drawing is attractive. The project may be only a dream, but apparently it is something of a definite nature since it is stated that the designs have all been prepared. Anyway, it betokens a spirit of progress in a progressive and rapidly-growing community of the state.

The announcement is not without interest here because Cumberland could well use something of the kind.

Another Discounting Faces Oil Depletion

A FEW YEARS FROM NOW atomic-age techniques may make possible the conversion of sea-bottom mud into petroleum. This startling statement comes from the American Chemical Society. It is merely additional proof of how foolish it is to make grave predictions about American oil resources.

Much of the oil that is being used today could have been drawn from the earth a generation ago, when a petroleum famine in twenty-five years was predicted. But scientists and the petroleum industry have always succeeded in pushing the prognosticators out on a limb and sawing it off. Eventually the prophets of oil exhaustion may give up.

Scientists are developing the theory that crude oil is formed by the radioactive transformation of organic substances. They are duplicating in the laboratory the radioactive process that may reveal how nature, over a period of ten million years, accomplishes the conversion of protoplasm, proteins, fats and other materials into oil.

The new attitude seems to be to make fullest use of the resources available today in the belief tomorrow will take care of itself—if scientists and industry are permitted to function freely.

Mrs. Tony Factor, wife of the golf pro at Elwood City, Pa., Country Club, complained that she hadn't been able to open a kitchen window for eight years, but the other night a burglar pried the window loose, climbed in and stole $705. Thus again is the Scriptural injunction verified that Heaven is the only place where thieves do not break in and steal.

An American man should view the spring hats with a feeling of pride that his country can get along in millinery without Paris, a commentator states. But is "pride" the exact word?

The college boys who formerly swallowed goldfish as a joke may soon be forced to include the custom in their serious eating.

This is the Year of the Dog, according to the Chinese calendar, which seems to have something there.

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, May 15—Many are the observers of the passing scene which write in and say that the Russian viewpoint isn't being adequately presented in world affairs or that the American press is emphasizing friction between Russia and the United States. But these friends of Russia do not know how difficult it is for the newspapers of the United States to get information out of Moscow.

Admittedly the "New York Times," for instance, is a great newspaper and a fair and objective publication. Yet the publisher of the "Times," Arthur Hays Sulzberger, in a report in the current issue of "Editor and Publisher," makes this significant revelation:

"We've striven and are constantly striving to get more correspondents into Russia. Brooks Atkinson, present Moscow correspondent for the Times', took six months and a personal cable to Stalin to get in. Drew Middleton, who is about to replace him, had his application for a visa for his passport pending more than a year.

"Why there should be so much difficulty, I don't know. We sought to have more than one man in Moscow. It was forbidden. We were recently told we were unfriendly and certain news stories were quoted as a sample of this. We were told there was a news bureau where stories could be checked for accuracy. The first story that was submitted was neither confirmed nor denied.

Important in News

"I think that Russia, the great country that it is, is the most important news story in the world. I wish we could put half a dozen men there and give you all the news.

"I still believe that freedom of access to the news is the sine qua non of peace because peace will come only with understanding, and somehow or other we've got to raise that iron curtain. I do not think it can be done by force. I do not think you can flood people on the other side with propoganda, but instead it can be done by the normal flow of news which is established by our sending correspondents there and their sending correspondents here and the normal wire service."

The "New York Times" isn't the only newspaper that has difficulty getting correspondents into Russia. The "Chicago Sun," owned by Marshall Field and a publication which is known to be friendly to Russia, has had several months' delay in trying to get a correspondent into Moscow. Other newspapers report the same kind of difficulty.

Answer Not Known

What is the answer? Nobody in Washington seems to know. Our government tries to use its good offices to get correspondents into Russia but without avail. The United States government has been urged to limit the number of Russian officials or agents who are coming into the United States until some understanding is reached with respect to the sending in of Americans to Russia.

Plainly there is a wide gulf between the two governments. The usual explanation made is that the governments are suspicious of one another or that communism doesn't trust capitalism or vice versa. But the American people and the Russian people, no matter what their economic systems may be, have a friendly feeling for one another. Gen. Eisenhower, for example, has told correspondents here of the fraternal conversations he has with Russian officers and there is no question in his mind about the desire of the Russian army men to develop closer relations with the Americans.

Cleavages Cause War Talk

Yet, in spite of these trends, there are difficulties. There are cleavages which actually make some people here talk in terms of possible war with Russia some day. There would not be the slightest basis for such speculative gossip except for the constant clashes in conferences between the governments and the refusal of the Russians to let the American people get closer to them, which would be the case if restrictions on the entry of the press into Russia and censorship were removed.

One explanation of the Russian policy of secrecy sometimes advanced here is that the Russians really are afraid to let the outside world know the true conditions under which the Russian populace lives for fear that communism would be hurt in the eyes of the outside world. Whether or not this is true, the Russians could meet such criticism readily by allowing more correspondents into their country to report the great progress which has been made since the days of the czars' regime.

A SUGGESTION FROM THE FISH

THE WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The War department is now closing down one of the most unique wartime arrangements ever made involving another country—a Russian radio station located right inside the Pentagon building.

Lifting of wartime secrecy now makes it possible to tell the inside story of this Russian radio transmitter.

Shortly after the USA and the USSR became allies, the Soviet embassy complained that it was not able to communicate to Moscow. Apparently the embassy did not trust American or British communications channels. Moreover, under the Federal Communications act it is illegal for any foreign country to operate a radio transmitter in the United States. Receiving sets can be used, but not sending.

When this problem was placed before President Roosevelt, he decided to cut red tape—and the law—by establishing a Russian radio station right inside the War department. Technically this was still illegal; but when located inside the Pentagon building no one knew about the transmitter except the army, and it was sworn to military secrecy.

Therefore the Russians were given a special section of the Pentagon building which they alone controlled. Russian guards policed this section night and day. No American was allowed inside. A total of seventy Russian officers and men staffed this extra-territorial area. It was as if a small section of American soil were set aside, subject to Soviet jurisdiction and law.

This arrangement has continued since the war—up until this week, when the Russian radio transmitter is supposed to close down.

Truman Ladies and Protocol

Probably the president don't know too much about it, but Mrs. Truman and daughter Margaret poked a finger into the State department the other day and tried to tell Secretary James Byrnes how he should run one phase of American diplomacy. They wanted a special friend of theirs, Stanley Woodward, appointed chief of protocol.

The man who holds this job orbitrates where visiting bigwigs, cabinet ladies and supreme court justices shall sit at official dinners. It was created about the time Dolly Gann and Alice Longworth began vying with each other as to which should precede the other at dinner; and, while the job at first was not considered important, Jimmy Dunn, the first protocol officer, proved that its close social connections could be of value when they eventually hoisted him to assistant secretary of state.

Secretary Byrnes had planned to appoint efficient Allan Dawson as chief of protocol, replacing retiring George T. Summerlin. In fact, Byrnes had even drafted a message to Montevideo, where Dawson is serving in the American embassy, telling him of his appointment. But suddenly he got a call from the White House.

Presidential Secretary Matt Connelly was on the phone, saying that President Truman wanted charming Stanley Woodward to be chief of protocol.

Irked at being told who should get a relatively routine job, Byrnes asked Connelly why the president wanted Woodward. Connelly finally confessed that Margaret and Mrs. Truman had taken a fancy to him. As assistant chief of protocol, he had helped out on various White House dinners.

Now Byrnes is on the spot between a commitment he had already made and the ladies of the Truman family.

OPA Fight Backfires

A hot fight is brewing inside the National Retail Dry Goods Association, which has been spearheading the kill-OPA drive. Powerful members, including the R. H. Macy Company, New York, and the City Store chain, are out to oust President Benjamin Namm and Executive Secretary Lew Hahn as a result of their back-stage lobbying in Congress, especially with Congressman Fred Hartley, of New Jersey.

The story goes back several months, to an NRDGA meeting in which the entire question of OPA was discussed. Namm, head of a Brooklyn department store, and Hahn argued for a strong drive against the price agency, while a powerful bloc within the association favored the price control principal but wanted administrative OPA changes.

Finally a compromise was reached, with Namm and Hahn given the green light to go ahead with a drive for changes in the pricing administration to wipe out "inequities."

Namm, however, is a good friend of industrialist Victor Emanuel, godfather of Truman's close friend RFC Commissioner George Allen. Emanuel is also a power in Republic Steel, the Aviation Corporation of America and the National Association of Manufacturers—which has been calling for the complete abolition of OPA. Friends say that it was Emanuel who finally convinced Namm that the National Retail Dry Goods Association should get behind the NAM drive.

Because of the membership vote, Namm never quite dared call for the complete abolition of OPA, but he did throw NRDGA support behind a number of amendments which, in their practical effect, mean the end of OPA.

In addition, he hired the Hill & Knowlton public relations agency to plan the NRDGA campaign. It is significant that Hill & Knowlton also handle public relations for Aviation Corporation and Republic Steel, two of the Emanuel enterprises.

The campaign was extremely successful in the House—in fact, too successful. Pressure from the buying public on NRDGA members became heavy enough to worry them. In addition, the moderates such as Macy's, Neiman-Marcus in Dallas, and Jelleff's in Washington, remember all too well what happened after the last war.

As a result even Namm and Hahn are now worried by the Frankenstein monster they helped build—the House OPA bill, and Congressman Hartley, of New Jersey, their chief spokesman in Congress, has begun to change his tune.

Note—The National Association of Manufacturers, however, hasn't changed. Tomorrow it will play luncheon host at the Waldorf Astoria for the American agriculture editors who expect to get a good "education" on price control.

It was at about this time that Dewey hastened to Washington and finally succeeded in allaying the misgivings of Secretary Schwellenbach, who also considered removing him.

Allied with McClure

However, Jim Dewey apparently meant what he said when he told friends he was going to run for Congress. For he is now back in Chester, Pa., running for the Republican nomination in Delaware county or the Seventh district.

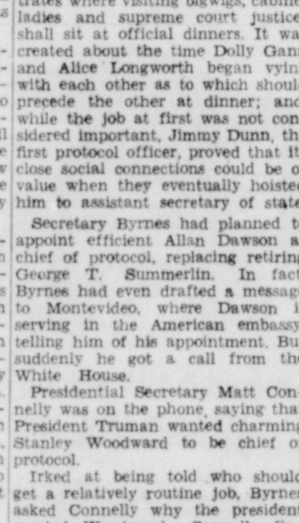

This county is controlled by one of the most notorious Republican machines in the country, whose boss, John J. McClure, was sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary for a giant bootleg conspiracy but was saved from serving his sentence when prohibition ended.

In some mysterious manner, Jim Dewey has formed an alliance with the McClure machine, and they are now spending thousands of dollars featuring his name on billboards all over the district. Who is putting up the money, nobody knows. It's a big mystery. But everyone does know that ordinarily the McClure machine doesn't go to town unless it is decidedly worth while.

Some people conclude that perhaps McClure finally has figured that the way to win votes is to get labor support and that Dewey is a made-to-order stalking horse for labor. Anyway the alliance is there and it's one of the most interesting in the turbulent politics of Pennsylvania.

Curiosity

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

Behind most of the great discoveries and inventions of all time has been this almost divine element of curiosity. The child's first outward actions are those of curiosity. Everything about it is new. Its urge is to learn, to find out.

And that is what has always been man's great urge—to get below the surface of things, and to find out the secret of things. This curiosity is a wonderful asset to anyone. It is creative. It gives incentive. It keeps enlarging one's knowledge. It can even lead to the discovery of one's self.

Curiosity may sometimes get us into trouble, but oftener it opens up new paths to thought and helps to reveal many a mystery. Curiosity is what has created our greatest scientists, and naturalists. Every day they delve into the unknown. But the more they delve the more they discover that much is useful to further progress in knowledge and interest.

It was the Wright's curiosity that spurred them to their attempts at flying. It was Newton's curiosity that made him think, as he noted an apple fall from the tree. It was curiosity that drove on Columbus. All experiments are banked with curiosity.

We are fascinated by people, because there is so much in each one to discover, and we are curious as to what each embodies, in mind, heart, and character. No other study is so thrilling as the study of people. In all the billions born, not a single one exactly the same! Why shouldn't their study be interesting and absorbing?

The scientist works with his microscope with the greatest of interest, for his curiosity is aroused at every step in his investigation. It's curiosity that largely influences one to take up a hobby. It's largely the search that produces the greatest joy.

A man, who builds up a business is always curious as to the methods used by his competitors. And he is curious about any experiment that may add to his own methods. It's curiosity that keeps driving us all ahead, unconsciously! My friend, George Stimpson, has just had published "A Book About a Thousand Things". He says he wrote it to "satisfy my curiosity."

It Says Here

By BOB HOPE

So far not much progress has been made in the coal strike, and it is easy to understand why John L. Lewis is being so independent during the negotiations. After all, he doesn't have to worry about keeping warm when he goes to bed at night. He can just pull his eyebrows down over his toes.

Of course, in Washington, D. C., they don't have much trouble keeping warm either. If things get too bad they just open the door to Congress and let the hot air take it from there.

A lot of businessmen in the East are having to work only from 2 to 5 in the afternoon because they have no way to keep warm in their offices, but of course some of them have secretaries.

The coal shortage is really confusing to the comedians in the East. They can't tell whether their acts are going over or the audience is just trying to keep its hands warm.

But the people who are building new homes in the East have found an answer to the coal shortage. Instead of installing fireplaces they are just pinning pictures of Jane Russell on the wall.

But I have inside information that those 400,000 miners aren't really striking. . . . It's just that they lent the little candle on their hats to Crosby for his birthday cake.

Truce Is a Regular Lewis Technique, Mark Sullivan Says

By MARK SULLIVAN

To suppose that anything permanently worthwhile will result from the twelve-day truce in the coal strike, which Mr. John L. Lewis granted, would be a triumph of optimism over sad experience. To grant truces is Mr. Lewis's technique—he manages strikes on the installment plan. In 1941 he began a strike in September, granted a thirty-day truce, renewed the strike, again granted a truce, and again renewed the strike and kept it up until he got what he had demanded.

It was during that off-again-on-again strike that President Roosevelt wrote one of the most remarkable letters ever written by a head of government to a private citizen: "For the third time, your government through me asks you . . . to authorize an immediate resumption of mining." Mr. Lewis continued the strike.

Closed Shop Won

It was during that same strike that President Roosevelt wrote another letter, likewise remarkable, considering the outcome, Mr. Lewis's demand was for a closed shop in some five per cent of the mines which did not have it. About Mr. Lewis's demand, President Roosevelt wrote: "I tell you frankly that the government of the United States will not order, nor will Congress pass, legislation ordering a so-called closed shop. . . The government will never compel this five per cent to join the union by government decree. . . ." Nevertheless Mr. Lewis, after prolonged and sensational bullying, got his closed shop.

No, forget the coal truce. The only cure is to remove the condition which makes it possible for Mr. Lewis and other labor leaders to do what they do. That condition is power confirmed on labor leaders and unions by existing laws—especially the Wagner Labor Relations act, as that act has been interpreted and enforced. For curing that, the only way is legislation by Congress.

Such legislation has started. The Case bill has passed the House. It is now before the Senate. And the thing that is important is what the Senate does.

Issue May Be Dodged

The Senate can amend the Case bill, weaken it or strengthen it—in short, write whatever labor measure expresses the view of a majority of the Senate. Or, conceivably the Senate might do nothing at all.

There may still be some possibility of this. A group of senators has for several years opposed legislation which would restrict the power of labor leaders and unions. The group is not large. But members of it make up a majority of the committee on labor, which is powerful on matters in this field. In the present situation, that committee had a proposal of postponement. As it was put early last week, before the Senate moved to take up the Case bill, by Senator Morse, of Oregon: "I should like to say that the committee on labor now has under consideration a proposal for . . . a three-man subcommittee to make an intensvie study and investigation regarding what legislation, if any, should be reported to this Congress at the beginning of the next session."

Study and investigation? It is tenable to estimate that committees of the House and Senate have given more time to hearings on labor than to any other subject of proposed legislation in all Congress's history. Congress knows the fact. Knowing the facts, a majority of Congress has been ready, even eager, to pass legislation any time during the past nine years ever since the sit-down strike of 1937. What has frustrated this wish is shown by one example.

In December 1941 the House passed a bill much like the present Case one, by an immense majority, 252 to 136. A majority of Democrats voted for it and a majority of Republicans voted for it. The bill went to the Senate, and from there to the committee on labor. From that committee it never emerged.

The smothering of that bill in the Senate committee on labor and Senate inaction upon similar bills, conformed to and was inspired by the Roosevelt administration. "It is a truthful commonplace," wrote Mr. Ernest Lindley in 1941, "that only the resistance of the administration has blocked legislation curbing the right to strike."

In the present situation, President Truman may oppose the Case bill, but he has no such weight with Congress as President Roosevelt had. Today, opposition to the Case bill, depends largely on what strength can be mustered by C.I.O., its Political Action Committee, and affiliated groups. They are very determined and, before the Senate moved to take up the Case bill, were vigorously active in bringing about pressure to prevent Senate consideration of the bill.

HUNTER'S SALAD . . . Appetizing meal-in-a-dish

By CHARLOTTE ADAMS
Associated Press Food Editor

The salad season is a blessing in these hard-to-get-food days. It's quite possible to make salads that are whole meals in themselves and full of nutritional quality.

Hunter's Salad

- 3 hard-cooked eggs, cut in wedges
- 2 cups fresh lima beans, cooked
- 1 cup American cheese, diced
- 1 cup celery, diced
- 1 medium onion, sliced thin to make rings
- ½ cup radishes, sliced
- Real mayonnaise
- Salad greens

Toss together egg, lima beans, cheese, celery, onion rings, radish slices and enough mayonnaise to hold them together. Line a salad bowl with greens and turn first mixture into the center.

Is mayonnaise a proolem to you? Here are a few ways to stretch what little you can get or make:

Ginger Cream Mayonnaise

- ¼ cup real mayonnaise
- ¼ cup sour cream
- 2 teaspoons candied ginger, chopped
- 1 tablespoon honey

Blend mayonnaise with remaining ingredients and, if possible, let stand over night. This dressing is particularly good with fruit salad.

Mustard-Tomato Mayonnaise

- ¼ cup real mayonnaise
- 1 teaspoon mustard with horseradish
- 2 tablespoons ketchup
- ¼ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- 1 tablespoon sour cream

Combine mayonnaise with remaining ingredients and serve over wedges of lettuce, tossed green salad or shredded cabbage.

Country Salad Topping

- ¼ cup real mayonnaise
- ¼ cup sour cream
- 1 scallion, chopped
- ⅛ cup tomato, diced
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper

Combine mayonnaise with remaining ingredients and serve over sliced cucumber or lettuce wedges.

Here's another meal-in-a-dish salad, for the making of which you must have a little oil for the French dressing, or dig up some ready-made if you possibly can:

Chef's Salad

- Lettuce
- Chicory
- 2 tomatoes
- ½ cup thin slivers cooked ham and cooked chicken
- ½ cup thin slivers Swiss-type cheese
- 3 anchovy fillets (optional)

Tear some lettuce and chicory into your big wooden salad bowl. Add quartered tomatoes, ham, chicken, cheese and anchovy fillets, cut up. A simple French dressing, made in the proportion of three tablespoons oil to one of vinegar with salt and freshly-ground pepper added, makes a delicious dressing for the salad.

Allegany Class of 1906 To Observe Anniversary

Entire Class To Attend Party at Ali Ghan Shrine Country Club June 8

The Allegany County high school class of 1906 will celebrate its fortieth anniversary with a banquet and general get-together at 6 o'clock June 8 in the Ali Ghan Shrine Country Club.

All fifteen members of the class are living and are expecting to attend this celebration, Clarence F. Schafer, chairman of arrangements, said last evening. All former teachers who can be contacted will also be invited.

Speaking of the school, Mr. Schafer said it was called Allegany County high school in those days and was held in the old Cumberland street school, which is now used by the welfare board. Howard C. Hill, Baltimore, head of prison welfare, was principal in 1906. The class during its freshman year had fifty-two students, but dwindled to fifteen the senior year and was the largest to graduate from the school up to that time.

Wants Merits Considered

One aged negro delegate told the convention that he did not favor this kind of debate and did not believe it was democratic or American. He said, "I want to be considered on the basis of a craftsman, and to be represented here as a union man and worker, and not as a negro. I want to stand on my merits as a worker and an American. I ask that and that only."

Some of the delegates cried that such a resolution created more discrimination than it eliminated, and set up a distinct class or racial difference within the organization. One white delegate told the convention the resolution represents "white discrimination".

The question was debated for more than an hour, but finally a vote was called for, and the motion to refer the question to the executive board was passed, despite the executive's objection.

Buxbaum told the convention he had tried to be fair and felt that the delegates should have settled the issue once and for all. He said the whole question should have been debated without confusion.

Several of the negro delegations left the convention immediately, and several white delegates complained to the chair of the action taken but were rapped down, when the chairman declared the vote ended the debate.

efforts to break down price control.

"When industry is fully converted", the OPA director declared, "our capacity to produce consumer goods will be greater than ever before. It is estimated that at full peacetime production, we shall need fifty per cent more purchasing power than we had in 1940 if there is to be a market for those goods. It was in anticipation of this need that wage increases were encouraged to keep take-home pay from falling far below war-time levels. It is true that this tends to increase pressure on prices. But we must have a sustained price level if we are to have high level of demand which guarantees us peace with prosperity.

"Labor unions have fought hard to get a decent life for America's working man", he concluded, "and OPA has fought hard to keep our economy strong during the terrible stresses of war and reconversion. OPA's job is nearly finished. Together, we can finish that job properly".

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

The Truth About That Explosion

For weeks Homer Bentley has tried to uproot that big stump in his hayfield . . . with team and tractor. Finally he succeeds—breaks a score of windows round about, and frightens the neighbors half to death!

"All I used," apologizes Homer, "was a couple of small sticks of dynamite, like you should."

"That was no two small sticks of dynamite," Judge Cunningham says severely—and it finally comes out that Homer got so cussed mad at that everlasting stump, he'd planted a charge of TNT beneath its roots.

Reminds you of all the excuses human beings use to cover up bad judgment. Like the "two-beer alibi." When somebody gets into trouble, and blames it on "a couple of beers," you can be mighty sure they are covering up the truth.

From where I sit, a moderate beverage like beer is a better way of keeping out of trouble than getting into it.

HOW'LL YOU HAVE YOUR EGGS?

This weather-beaten trouble-shooter isn't worrying about your eggs—or whether you want 'em soft boiled, fried, scrambled—or if you like eggs at all.

But he is worrying about keeping your electric service flowing along as usual. If that means eggs for your breakfast, okay then, that's why he's up on a storm-lashed power pole.

And, he'll stay there till he gets your line repaired—in spite of hot wires sputtering around him. In spite of rain . . . lightning . . . thunder . . . and a high wind howling, "Watch out, fella, we're gonna hit it again!"

You don't have to send him a check for his trouble. You won't pay any more on your electric bill—to cover his hard, wet work and the materials he uses. Chances are you'll never even know a line went out.

This kind of service is routine stuff for the trouble-shooter and the electric company he works for. Storms—the repairs and cost—are all prepared for and handled in a businesslike way. But it isn't an easy job. Keeping your electric service dependable and cheap is the result of careful planning and sound business management.

Stanley P. Hawse, county chairman for the emergency food collection announces a countywide food collection campaign will start this week ending next Monday May 20.

Committees have been named at five points in the county to collect food for shipment to the starving children, women and men of the wartorn countries of the world.

Collection points are Mathias graded school, Wardensville graded school, Moorefield graded school, Baker and Burch schools. The Emergency Food Collection Committee requests donations of all kinds of non-perishable foods, dried foods, dehydrated foods, canned foods or cash donations. The committee requests the help of church groups, farm womens organizations or any other civic groups in the county.

The Hardy county food collection is a part of the UNRRA Emergency Food program.

Winners Announced

Golden Horseshoe winners in the countywide tests were Josephine Turner of Wallace school and Richard Barr of Steel Run school, according to the announcement of R. S. Dispanet, Hardy county superintendent of schools.

The two winners were selected on the basis of the tests given for eighth grade elementary and eighth grade junior high school in the county. The winners will be eligible to participate in the Knights and Ladies of the Golden Horseshoe ceremonies to be held in Charleston at the state capitol.

The ceremony, discontinued during the war, may be revived this year. The county Parent-Teacher associations defray the expenses of the trip to Charleston for the winners. Dispanet stated that the winners of the contests the past three years are eligible to make the trip to Charleston if and when, the ceremonies are revived.

The order was issued to permit the inclusion of Harvey D. Beeler of Berkeley Springs on the Republican primary ballot.

The preliminary election ballots are for the absentee ballots of service men.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

The Truth About That Explosion

For weeks Homer Bentley has tried to uproot that big stump in his hayfield . . . with team and tractor. Finally he succeeds—breaks a score of windows round about, and frightens the neighbors half to death!

"All I used," apologizes Homer, "was a couple of small sticks of dynamite, like you should."

"That was no two small sticks of dynamite," Judge Cunningham says severely—and it finally comes out that Homer got so cussed mad at that everlasting stump, he'd planted a charge of TNT beneath its roots.

Reminds you of all the excuses human beings use to cover up bad judgment. Like the "two-beer alibi." When somebody gets into trouble, and blames it on "a couple of beers," you can be mighty sure they are covering up the truth.

From where I sit, a moderate beverage like beer is a better way of keeping out of trouble than getting into it.

CONSTIPATION often results when your GALL BLADDER doesn't send bile every day into your intestines!

People who have suffered from constipation for years are amazed to find that this is often caused by a lack of bile flowing freely every day from the gall bladder into intestines. So speed up that sluggish bile flow with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—made especially for this purpose.

Olive Tablets—used so successfully for years by Dr. F. M. Edwards for his patients with lazy bile flow and constipation—are a purely vegetable product. They're simply wonderful to pep up bile flow from the gall bladder into the intestines to help digest fatty foods, and give gentle yet thorough bowel movements. No griping. Follow label directions. 15¢, 30¢

Stock Market Prices Retreat For Third Consecutive Session

NEW YORK, May 15—(AP)—Stock market prices continued to retreat today for the third consecutive session, although a few utilities and selected industrials made some progress.

The trend was irregular until mid-morning when the soft coal operators flatly refused a demand by miners for a seven per cent payroll levy to finance a welfare fund.

American Telephone was off three-eighths at $194.12.

Activity was slow throughout most of the proceedings with volume hitting 1,020,000 compared with 1,140,000 Tuesday.

United States Steel was down three-fourth at $84. General Motors declined one and one-half at $70.62. Eastern Air Lines retreated two to $122.50 and Standard Oil (N.J.) lost one and one-fourth at $77.

Other losers included Bethlehem, Chrysler, Goodyear, Montgomery Ward, Oliver Corporation, Glenn Martin, North American, Anaconda, Kennecott, Westinghouse, du Pont, Allied Chemical, Santa Fe, Chesapeake and Ohio, Commercial solvents and distillers Corporation.

Gaining were Hiram Walker, up three and one-half at $130.50; Dow Chemical, five higher at $18; Douglas Aircraft, Electric Power and Light, United States Gypsum, Baltimore and Ohio and United States Lines.

Colonial Airlines, Creole Petroleum, Hygrade Foods, Phillips Packing and Diana Stores advanced in the Curb where transfers totaled 440,000 against 430,000 yesterday. Montreal Light and Midvale declined.

The bond market braced itself for heavy selling in the government's Victory loan but the wide-heralded predictions failed to pan out.

Instead, the tide moved in the opposite direction and net gains for most all treasury loans was the result.

Sales of $3,430,000 compared with $3,450,000 Tuesday.

Girl Asked by Boy To Change Faith Requests Advice

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX
Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl of 17 and go with a boy 18. We love each other very much.

He wants to marry me, but there is one thing wrong. We belong to different churches. He says unless I change, he won't marry me. We get along very well. We don't fight or argue, but agree on everything. We have gone together for two years.

What I want to know is, would it be a mistake to change churches, or must I lose the boy I want?

WORRIED

This is a very difficult question, and one on which it is impossible to give a yes or no answer.

There have been many cases where a man or a girl have changed churches for the sake of marrying someone belonging to a different faith and it has worked out very happily. And on the other hand, there have been just as many where it has not worked at all. Sometimes each one has kept to his or her own faith, and because they were tolerant people, and very much in love, they were able to work out a satisfactory adjustment on this basis.

But you are both very young, and it seems to me you should not be in a hurry to make a decision that may have very important consequences for your entire life. Why not wait awhile and see how you both feel later on? In the meantime, you might go and consult your minister or priest about the matter.

He "Talks Awful" about Her

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am very much in love with a man of 23.

He used to take me out, and he seemed to like me. Now he doesn't ask me out, and to one person he talks awful about me, but to my dad he says how nice I am.

He just went away, and it seems as if the bottom of the world has dropped out for me. Please tell me what I should do. I want him back, but I don't know how to get him back, or if he is worth breaking my heart over.

PUZZLED GIRL.

You know perfectly well he's not worth breaking your heart over, or you wouldn't have brought up that point at all. If you were really in love with him, and thought he was the kind of man who could make you happy, it would never enter your head to wonder if he was worth bothering about.

Why in the world would you want anyone who says mean things about you behind your back? And who makes it still worse by being so two-faced that he says pleasant things about you on other occasions? You're not the kind of girl who likes to be treated rough, are you? That's certainly no happiness in that.

Better be thankful you found out what a cheap type he is before things went so far that he really broke your heart.

WHAT IS FAITH?

"I notice," crabs he, "that you often write about faith. It always jars on me. I don't believe that writers, particularly such a virile one as yourself, should devote newspaper space to religious subjects."

Where do you get the notion that faith is exclusively a religious subject, brother? Faith is no pretty gesture reserved for especially ecclesiastical occasions. Faith is as common as bread and butter. No one department of life has a corner on it. Faith isn't necessarily a religious function. We all have it. We all can use it. It's as much a part of us as our arms or legs—a powerful, but invisible organ by which we reach out toward that which we desire.

Sinners can employ faith as well as saints—and often do so far more effectively!

"Why do the wicked flourish while the righteous take a beating?" wailed King David. Or words to that effect. The wicked triumph all too often because they have more faith in themselves and their deeds than the good.

Goodness all too often is a negative affair. The righteous are apt to be satisfied if they obey the law and keep out of jail. But the wicked are direct action boys. They believe in go-getters. They know what they want and they have faith in their ability to get it. They use their faith as they use their guns and brass knuckles. If Christians had one tenth as much faith we'd be a lot nearer the kingdom of heaven.

Faith comes before all achievement. Before the first savage modeled the first clay bowl, he had a vision of that bowl in his groping mind and the faith that he could make it.

Faith applies to every situation in life, the humble as well as the exalted. You can't bake a cake or build a house or fly a plane without faith. You can't succeed in any business or profession without faith. You can't understand yourself or anyone else without faith.

You don't have to create faith, you were born with it. You used it in your first step—in your first grasp at a bright object. Faith is part of your normal equipment. But you can develop faith as you develop muscles. You can use it consciously and deliberately and so doing extend your life boundaries.

Every great discoverer, every great inventor, every great leader and teacher was a man of great faith.

And every failure is a man who lets his faith wither and flop.

Cemetery Lot Owners Are Asked To Co-operate in Preparations

By RUDOLPH NICKEL

FROSTBURG, May 15—The joint committees of Farrady Post No. 24, American Legion, and John R. Fairgrieve Post No. 2462, Veterans of Foreign Wars, in charge of the Memorial day services to be held in Allegany cemetery May 30, are asking that all lot owners co-operate with the cemetery management in having the town's largest burial grounds in perfect condition for the Memorial day exercises, which are expected to attract a large turnout of Frostburg and Georges Creek residents.

A. Charles Stewart, head of the cemetery company, who is to be the principal speaker at the exercises, stated that his company will appropriate sufficient money to have all the lateral lanes mowed and all rubbish removed from the cemetery inclosure.

The Memorial day exercises this year will be the first to be held under the joint auspices of the town's two leading service organizations. They planned to have the graves of veterans of all past wars decorated with an American flag.

Cemetery Superintendent John Thomas and his assistants are working daily cleaning up the lots in their charge and many lot owners from Frostburg and outlying districts have been cleaning up their plots in recent weeks.

The Arion band, meeting Monday evening, voted to take part in Allegany cemetery exercises and also to play at the grave of Prof. George Vogtman, former director of the band. Following the services in Allegany cemetery, the band will go to the Eckhart cemetery and play at the grave of R. Hilary Lancaster, who was director of the band following the death of Prof. Vogtman.

The American Legion and VFW committee will have a firing squad visit all other local cemeteries during the day, with a chaplain and bugler, to fire a salute to the dead, sound taps and read the soldier's prayer for the dead. A salute will also be fired at the Memorial roll of honored dead at the corner of West Main and Water streets.

Eisel Rites Set

Final rites for Jacob Eisel, 82, who died Saturday at his home, 269 East Main street, were held Tuesday at 2:30 p. m. at the residence, with the Rev. George L. Wehler, pastor of Salem Evangelical and Reformed church, officiating.

The pallbearers were Harry Eisel, Noah Close, Philip Jenkins, William Sullivan, George Lemmert and William Close. Interment was in Allegany cemetery.

Frostburg Briefs

Robert Goldfelty, president of the Arion band, received a check for $25 yesterday from G. Dud Hocking, president of the Fidelity Savings bank, to be applied to the fund being raised by public subscription to recondition the instruments of the band. Hocking is a former member of the band.

The students of St. Michael's parochial school are conducting a drive among the parishioners this week for canned goods for destitute residents of European countries. Every wage earner in the parish has been asked to donate cans of fruit, vegetables or milk.

Frostburg Lodge No. 470, B.P.O. Elks, donated $250 last evening to the Frostburg Recreation Association for the summer program for children of the community. A special appeal in behalf of the program was made by the Rev. Francis E. Montgomery, administrator of St. Michael's Catholic church.

The "Football for Beall" committee, meeting Monday evening in the city hall, reported the receipt of donations from the Fraternal Order of Eagles, $25; Dr. W. O. McLane, $25; Dr. Hilda J. Walters, $15; Eckhart Square Circle Association, $5. The total donation to date amounts to $1,293. This money will be used to equip a football team for the school.

Legion and VFW To Note Memorial Day in Frostburg

Cemetery Lot Owners Are Asked To Co-operate in Preparations

By RUDOLPH NICKEL

FROSTBURG, May 15—The joint committees of Farrady Post No. 24, American Legion, and John R. Fairgrieve Post No. 2462, Veterans of Foreign Wars, in charge of the Memorial day services to be held in Allegany cemetery May 30, are asking that all lot owners co-operate with the cemetery management in having the town's largest burial grounds in perfect condition for the Memorial day exercises, which are expected to attract a large turnout of Frostburg and Georges Creek residents.

A. Charles Stewart, head of the cemetery company, who is to be the principal speaker at the exercises, stated that his company will appropriate sufficient money to have all the lateral lanes mowed and all rubbish removed from the cemetery inclosure.

The Memorial day exercises this year will be the first to be held under the joint auspices of the town's two leading service organizations. They planned to have the graves of veterans of all past wars decorated with an American flag.

Cemetery Superintendent John Thomas and his assistants are working daily cleaning up the lots in their charge and many lot owners from Frostburg and outlying districts have been cleaning up their plots in recent weeks.

The Arion band, meeting Monday evening, voted to take part in Allegany cemetery exercises and also to play at the grave of Prof. George Vogtman, former director of the band. Following the services in Allegany cemetery, the band will go to the Eckhart cemetery and play at the grave of R. Hilary Lancaster, who was director of the band following the death of Prof. Vogtman.

The American Legion and VFW committee will have a firing squad visit all other local cemeteries during the day, with a chaplain and bugler, to fire a salute to the dead, sound taps and read the soldier's prayer for the dead. A salute will also be fired at the Memorial roll of honored dead at the corner of West Main and Water streets.

Stutterer Has Some Straight Talk for Mamas

By ROSALIND SHAFFER
AP Newsfeatures Writer

HOLLYWOOD—Roscoe Ates, the stuttering comic, has come back from war duty, and finds that during his absence the National Parent-Teachers Association has crabbed his act. He can't stutter any more.

"What, never?" says Ates, wondering how he'll make a living.

"Well, hardly ever," says the Hollywood censorship office, a bit softheartedly.

On his recent return from service, first as an instructor in aviation and later on an entertainment assignment, Ates was offered a contract by Robert Emmett, PRC Producer, as a stuttering cowboy in a series of films. However, the Motion Pictures Producers Association informed Emmett that Ates' stuttering would not be allowed because of the PTA protest.

Ates says he believes the protest was founded on the belief that since children imitate him, they will become stammerers. This, says Ates, is not the case. Stuttering is not acquired in that way.

Ates' success as a stuttering comedian is due largely to the fact that he does it so naturally. He was a hopeless stutterer until 18, when he went to music school. There he discovered the way to cure it. He says it is simply a matter of understanding the nature of the trouble and then curing oneself. An important part of Ates' career has been his work in curing other stutterers.

"When I was in England," says Ates, "something I said on the subject was printed in one of the London papers with the result that I got an avalanche of mail from stammerers who wanted help.

Next thing I knew I was working with 75 to 100 subjects a day. People came from all over Europe, even from Egypt."

Ates has a few pointers for parents with stuttering children.

"If your child begins to stutter you'll notice that it's when he's excited, hot and tired. Don't reprove him or you'll set the habit. Calmly tell him to sit down, get his breath and tell you slowly what he has on his mind. If you do this you'll never have a stutterer."

Johnny Waltman turned in a three-hit pitching performance and struck out eight as Hyndman high school snapped Allegany high school's four-game winning streak yesterday at Hyndman, Pa., in a Tri-State Interscholistic Conference game. The score was 2 to 0.

Only twenty-two AHS batsmen faced the Hyndman right hander in the seven inning contest and only one Cumberland runner advanced as far as second base. In the first inning Baker singled and was later the victim of a double play. Perrell hit safely in the third but went out stealing. Radcliffe obtained the third and final hit for AHS in the fourth and stole second base but he died there. Waltman failed to issue a pass or hit a batter.

Jamison Is Loser

Hyndman solved the offerings of Tom Jamison for eight hits and their two tallies in the first five innings. Sid "Lefty" Weinbach pitched the final frame for the Campers.

Coach McVicker's team scored its first run in the third when Emerick and Stair singled, Phillippi advanced both runners on a sacrifice, Bob Miller was purposely passed to fill the bases and Radcliffe dropped a throw to the plate on Manges's fielder's choice which scored Emerick.

In the fifth Stair singled, moved to second on Phillippi's sacrifice, took third on Miller's infield out and came home on Ed Manges's single.

The victory was Hyndman's third in six starts in the conference while the setback was the first for Allegany in five games and tied the Campers with Beall, of Frostburg, for first place in the five-team circuit.

Burke Wins in Debut

Glenn Burke, making his debut on the mound for Fort Hill high school, limited Paw Paw high school to two safeties—singles by Zorich and J. Cadigan—as the Sentinels banged out twenty hits to trounce the Mountaineers on the latter's field by the score of 22 to 1.

Burke fired the third strike past nine batsmen, yielded three passes, hit two batsmen, and helped himself to two hits.

Coach Bobby Cavanaugh's swatsmiths gathered twenty blows, including eight two-baggers and Johnny Brown's second home run of the season, a long distance wallop to centerfield in the fifth inning with Freeland on base.

Freeland collected two doubles and a single, Jim Mangus had a pair of two-baggers, Dean a double and three one-base knocks and Frye three singles.

It was Fort Hill's third conference win against as many defeats. In suffering its seventh straight loss, Paw Paw was charged with committing twelve errors. The boxes:

Faces Only 26 Batsmen, Fans 10 as LaSalle Sweeps Series

Pat "Lefty" Creegan flashed his best form of the season yesterday when he set down Masontown high school with three hits and struck out ten batsmen in pitching LaSalle high school to a 9 to 0 triumph over the West Virginians on their home field.

Only twenty-six batsmen faced the Explorers' portsider in the seven-inning game. Three reached first base on hits, two got there via passes and one batter was hit by a pitched ball. Creegan fanned the side in the first and fifth frames.

LaSalle scored its first run in the fourth on Jack Steiner's triple and Stakem's single and sewed up the game in the fifth by batting around for six tallies. During the rally Collins and Close hit two-baggers, Esposito and Reissig was hit by a pitched ball. Ten players went to bat during the merry-go-round.

The Explorers concluded their scoring with two tallies in the seventh on a hit batsman, stolen base and timely hits by Deffenbaugh and Stakem.

Reds Beat Giants On Graham's Muff

Error Gives Cincinnati Victory over Giants in Tenth, 2-1

NEW YORK, May 15 (AP)—Jack Graham's tenth inning muff of Mike McCormick's fly ball enabled Max West to score with the decisive run of Cincinnati's 2-1 victory tonight over the New York Giants before 35,975 fans.

Joe Beggs, who earned his fourth straight decision, at the expense of relief Gene (Junior) Thompson, a former teammate, had a shutout with one out in the ninth inning but Willard Marshall lofted a home run into the right field stands to tie it up. Score:

Golfers Will Seek $15,000 in Texas

FORT WORTH, Tex., May 15. (AP) —The $15,000 Colonial National Invitation, probably the most exclusive tournament in golf, opens tomorrow with most everyone worried about a tough course except the favorite, Lord Byron Nelson.

Only reason Nelson hasn't fretted about the long, rugged, par 35-35 -70, 6,850-yard lay-out is that he hasn't had time to play it. Byron has been looking after his Texas interests and autographing a book he authored to get in a practice round on the course which he last played in 1941—the year of the national open.

The remainder of the field of twenty-four professionals and five amateurs expressed more concern about Nelson's absence than if he had been present burning up the course. "Every time Byron passes up practice that means he's ready," said PGA Tournament Manager Fred Corcoran.

Guild Asks Meeting With Pirates' Prexy

BOSTON, May 15. — (AP) — The American Baseball Guild late today sent a telegram to President William E. Benswanger of the Pittsburg Pirates asking that National League club to meet with the Guild for collective bargaining purposes.

It was the first such action taken by the Guild which, a spokesman said, represents "more than 90 percent of the players" on the Pittsburgh roster.

The telegram was signed by Joseph F. X. Doherty, attorney, and Robert Murphy, labor relations director of the Guild which recently charged Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington Senators, with "intimidating and coercing his players from their rights to join or form a labor organization."

Murphy said that similar requests soon would be made of other baseball clubs.

Pollet, Sisler Feature as Cards Beat Brooklyn

Lefty Tosses 5-Hitter; Dick's Triple Wins Battle, 1-0

BROOKLYN, May 15 (AP) — Lefty Howie Pollet and young Dick Sisler combined their talents to give the St. Louis Cardinals a tingling 1 to 0 victory over Broklyn today and a sweep of their two-game series as the Red Birds again took over the National league lead by eleven percentage points.

A crowd of 26,925 fans turned out for the series' finale. Up to the time the Cards showed up, the Brooks had won all eight of their previous Ebbets field encounters.

FRIDAY GAMES
Fort Hill at Beall

LaSalle at Hyndman

Johnny Waltman turned in a three-hit pitching performance and struck out eight as Hyndman high school snapped Allegany high school's four-game winning streak yesterday at Hyndman, Pa., in a Tri-State Interscholstic Conference game. The score was 2 to 0.

Only twenty-two AHS batsmen faced the Hyndman right hander in the seven inning contest and only one Cumberland runner advanced as far as second base. In the first inning Baker singled and was later the victim of a double play. Perrell hit safely in the third but went out stealing. Radcliffe obtained the third and final hit for AHS in the fourth and stole second base but he died there. Waltman failed to issue a pass or hit a batter.

Jamison Is Loser

Hyndman solved the offerings of Tom Jamison for eight hits and their two tallies in the first five innings. Sid "Lefty" Weinbach pitched the final frame for the Campers.

Coach McVicker's team scored its first run in the third when Emerick and Stair singled. Phillippi advanced both runners on a sacrifice, Bob Miller was purposely passed to fill the bases and Radcliffe dropped a throw to the plate on Manges's fielder's choice which scored Emerick.

In the fifth Stair singled, moved to second on Phillippi's sacrifice, took third on Miller's infield out and came home on Ed Manges's single.

The victory was Hyndman's third in six starts in the conference while the setback was the first for Allegany in five games and tied the Campers with Beall, of Frostburg, for first place in the five-team circuit.

Burke Wins in Debut

Glenn Burke, making his debut on the mound for Fort Hill high school, limited Paw Paw high school to two safeties—singles by Zorich and J. Cadigan—as the Sentinels banged out twenty hits to trounce the Mountaineers on the latter's field by the score of 22 to 1.

Burke fired the third strike past nine batsmen, yielded three passes, hit two batsmen, and helped himself to two hits.

Coach Bobby Cavanaugh's swatsmiths gathered twenty blows, including eight two-baggers and Johnny Brown's second home run of the season, a long distance wallop to centerfield in the fifth inning with Freeland on base.

Freeland collected two doubles and a single, Jim Mangus had a pair of two-baggers, Dean a double and three one-base knocks and Frye three singles.

It was Fort Hill's third conference win against as many defeats. In suffering its seventh straight loss, Paw Paw was charged with committing twelve errors. The boxes:

Frostburg Loses To California

Pennsy Teachers Annex Final of Series at Home, 9-0

FROSTBURG, May 15 — Taking advantage of three fielding errors California State Teachers College scored six runs in the first inning and defeated Frostburg State Teachers College today in a return game at California, Pa., by the score of 9 to 0. The victory gave the Pennsylvanians a clean sweep of the series.

California won the opener here last week by the score of 19 to 0.

J. Roodhouse let Frostburg down with five hits and whiffed ten batsmen while Sonnenberg yielded eight hits and struck out ten. The only extra base hit of the game was a double by Centerfielder Biss.

Frostburg will play Mount St. Mary's College in the final game of the series between the schools next Monday at Emmitsburg, Md. The box:

NEW YORK, May 15 (AP)—Jack Graham's tenth inning muff of Mike McCormick's fly ball enabled Max West to score with the decisive run of Cincinnati's 2-1 victory tonight over the New York Giants before 35,975 fans.

Joe Beggs, who earned his fourth straight decision, at the expense of relief Gene (Junior) Thompson, a former teammate, had a shutout with one out in the ninth inning but Willard Marshall lofted a home run into the right field stands to tie it up. Score:

Golfers Will Seek $15,000 in Texas

FORT WORTH, Tex., May 15. (AP)—The $15,000 Colonial National Invitation, probably the most exclusive tournament in golf, opens tomorrow with most everyone worried about a tough course except the favorite, Lord Byron Nelson.

Only reason Nelson hasn't fretted about the long, rugged, par 35-35—70, 6,850-yard lay-out is that he hasn't had time to play it. Byron has been looking after his Texas interests and autographing a book he authored to get in a practice round on the course which he last played in 1941—the year of the national open.

The remainder of the field of twenty-four professionals and five amateurs expressed more concern about Nelson's absence than if he had been present burning up the course. "Every time Byron passes up practice that means he's ready," said PGA Tournament Manager Fred Corcoran.

Guild Asks Meeting With Pirates' Prexy

BOSTON, May 15. — (AP) — The American Baseball Guild late today sent a telegram to President William E. Benswanger of the Pittsburg Pirates asking that National League club to meet with the Guild for collective bargaining purposes.

It was the first such action taken by the Guild which, a spokesman said, represents "more than 90 percent of the players" on the Pittsburgh roster.

The telegram was signed by Joseph F. X. Doherty, attorney, and Robert Murphy, labor relations director of the Guild which recently charged Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington Senators, with "intimidating and coercing his players from their rights to join or form a labor organization."

Murphy said that similar requests soon would be made of other baseball clubs.

Lefty Tosses 5-Hitter; Dick's Triple Wins Battle, 1-0

BROOKLYN, May 15 (AP) — Lefty Howie Pollet and young Dick Sisler combined their talents to give the St. Louis Cardinals a tingling 1 to 0 victory over Broklyn today and a sweep of their two-game series as the Red Birds again took over the National league lead by eleven percentage points.

A crowd of 26,925 fans turned out for the series' finale. Up to the time the Cards showed up, the Brooks had won all eight of their previous Ebbets field encounters.

Pollet limited the Dodgers to five well-scattered hits in handing them their first shutout of the year, while Sisler hammered across the only run of the game with a terrific 400 foot triple off the center field wall after Whitey Kurowski had doubled in the second inning.

Birds Get Podgajny

CLEVELAND, May 15 (AP) — The Cleveland Indians anounced today they had sold Johnny Podgajny, right hander purchased from the Baltimore Orioles last winter, back to the International League club.

Mainly a relief hurler, the talkative pitcher won twenty games for the Orioles last season. He had been used only a few times this season by the Indians.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our dear Mother, Rachel Adams, who died one year ago May 16, 1945.

Your memory is as dear today
As in the hour you passed away,
To have, to hold and then to part
Is the greatest sorrow of our hearts.

You had a smile for everyone,
A heart as pure as gold,
To all who knew and loved you,
Your memory will never grow old.

Although your soul is now at rest
And free from care and pain
This world would seem like Heaven
If we had you back again.

Sadly missed by daughters,
MRS. LENA MUNSIE,
MRS. EVA GROSS,
MRS. ETHEL MUNSIE,
AND GRANDCHILDREN,

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our dear Mother, Rachel Adams, who died one year ago May 16, 1945.

Your memory is as dear today
As in the hour you passed away,
To have, to hold and then to part
Is the greatest sorrow of our hearts.

You had a smile for everyone,
A heart as pure as gold,
To all who knew and loved you,
Your memory will never grow old.

Although your soul is now at rest
And free from care and pain
This world would seem like Heaven
If we had you back again.

Sadly missed by daughters,
MRS. LENA MUNSIE,
MRS. EVA GROSS,
MRS. ETHEL MUNSIE,
AND GRANDCHILDREN.

Union Committee, Celanese Officials Reach Agreement On New Contract

Eight Cents an Hour Increase Approved at First of Two Local Membership Meetings

Prospects for industrial peace for another year at the Amcelle plant of the Celanese Corporation of America appeared to be bright last night.

Negotiations were concluded yesterday with representatives of Local 1874, TWUA, and the management agreeing on all major points of a new agreement.

The union's committee last night presented a unanimous report to the first of two ratification meetings of the membership at Textile hall. The rembership voted unanimously to approve the proposed contract. The second of the two ratification meetings will be held at 10 a. m. today.

While officials of the company and the union last night declined to make a statement until after today's final union meeting, representatives of the union who attended last night's meeting and representatives of the company reported that both negotiating teams are well satisfied with the agreement.

Workers Get 8 Cents

Union members announced that under the new agreement they will receive an increase of eight cents an hour across the board for all employes — the major point the union was seeking. Company representatives said this report was correct and said the company had also achieved its major aim in the current negotiations, namely, a full year of industrial peace.

Under the terms of the agreement now up for ratification, wages would be frozen for at least six months and could only be reopened at that time if the index of the Bureau of Labor Statistics goes over ten points.

This clause, of course, is to provide protection in case of runaway inflation anytime in the next twelve months. The probability of the index fluctuating to such an extent is slight unless all controls went off and the country went what one representative termed "hog wild."

Effective Until May, 1947

If ratified, the contract would be effective until May of 1947 providing the statistics index of the bureau remains reasonably stable. The increase in pay provided for the employes does not become effective, however, until the first pay week after ratification. In other words, there would be no retroactivity under the terms of the agreement.

Both Fred T. Small, plant manager, and Edward R. Allan, personnel manager, last night declined to issue statements other than to state that the negoiations had been completed with the company and union negotiators in agreement.

William Boyd Coleman, president of Local 1874, reported that the negotiating committee submitted a unanimous report which was unanimously approved by the membership at last night's meeting. Other union officials declined to issue statements.

However, it was obvious that the representatives of both the union and the company were satisfied with the contract and were hopeful that the big plant, which has been referred to as the "bread basket of Allegany county" will continue in uninterrupted operation for another year.

Representatives of the respective negotiating committees reported last night that this year's contract discussions were wholly amicable and that some concessions were made on both sides.

Small told a reporter that in his opinion "both sides did a good job" across the conference table.

Laundry Workers Sign New Contract

Six Cents Hourly Wage Increase Is Included in Agreement

An agreement has been reached between the Cumberland and Crystal Laundries and United Laundry Workers, Local 40, CIO, Mrs. Bernadette R. Trost, president of the local, announced last evening.

An overall increase of six cents per hour for all hourly rated employes was the chief change in the working agreement which will be effective until May 28, 1947, the union official said. The wage increase brings to fifty-eight cents the minimum salary paid to members of the local.

The working agreement also contains provisions for an allowance of $10 in addition to the basic salaries for drivers during the vacation period.

Laundry workers with one year's service receive one week's paid vacation while those with over five years' service receive two weeks' vacation, and all receive six paid holidays.

The companies and union agreed that the contract may be reopened to discuss wages if Congress enacts legislation requiring laundries to pay wages higher than the minimum wages provided in the agreement or in the event that the Office of Price Administration shall remove the ceiling prices from such commodities as rents, food and clothing.

In either case, the union official said, thirty days written notice must be given before wage negotiations may begin.

McCormick Urges Careful Buying Of Scarce Goods

Asks County Residents To Support Price Control for Another Year

Urging county residents to buy only what they need of scarce commodities for the next year, until reconversion production gets rolling, Leo H. McCormick, state OPA director, said last night that if such action is taken, continued price control will bring an era of "great prosperity."

McCormick addressed seventy persons at a rent control meeting sponsored by the county OPA information panel and held in the city hall auditorium.

Citing the "vicious" black market now in operation, McCormick said that ninety per cent of the nation's producers and merchants are honest, while only the remaining ten per cent engage in black market activities.

"Through income tax investigations, the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the OPA, they will be brought to justice," he stated.

The public must be informed regarding the danger of removing price control at this time, when full-time production has not been achieved and when the average person has more spending money than he had before the war, McCormick said.

Although last year, meat production was thirty per cent above that of any year since before the war, more people have money to buy meat, and the demand is further increased by the need of feeding our occupation forces abroad, as well as providing food for starving peoples in foreign countries, the state direstor said.

Regarding the housing situation, which he termed the most critical in history, McCormick said that for the past five years there has been little or no building construction, while in the meantime the population has shown a decided increase, with the high percenatge of veterans who are getting married after leaving the service.

He said it has been estimated that when the United States went to war, there was a housing shortage of a million and a half housing units, whereas now there is a shortage of two million and a half units.

Warns of Bread Reduction

Referring to the local shortage of bread, cake and other sweet bakery products, McCormick said that the only other comparable situation in this part of the country is near Buffalo, N. Y.

Through an order of the department of Agriculture, bakers will get only seventy-five per cent of the amount of flour that they got before the war, and that means that county residents must suffer a twenty-five per cent reduction in available supplies of bread for the next six or eight weeks.

Walter R. Heath, district rent executive, gave a short talk on rent control, pointing out that next to food, rent is the largest item in the average man's budget, and adding that at the present time there are 300,000 dwelling units in the state registered with the rent division of the OPA.

Citing the pressure being brought on Congress now to put into effect a fifteen per cent increase on all rents, Heath stated emphatically that no such increase has been allowed as yet, and told tenants who are paying more than the amount of rent authorized by the OPA to get in touch with the area rent office.

He said that in the past year, the local rent office, staffed by three persons, has had 2,000 tenants' complaints, has interviewed 3,000 persons and has handled more than 5,000 telephone calls.

After World War I, Heath said, rents increased from twenty-five to 100 per cent, the average being an increase of fifty-four per cent. Due to rent control, however, the average increase since the beginning of World War II is less than four per cent, he stated.

Open Forum Held

Nearly an hour of the two-hour meeting was devoted to a forum discussion, in which landlords stated their personal rent problems. Questions were answered by Heath and Thomas E. Barrett, Jr., chief rent attorney for the state OPA office, and complaints were referred to Caleb White, area rent director, who was also present.

One landlord asked whether it is permissible for rent inspectors to inspect a housing unit when the owner is absent. When Heath said that such action was not permissible, the landlord stated that White had inspected one of his rented apartments when no one was on the premises. Heath said he would take the matter up with White personally.

Another landlord stated that the OPA had notified him that the rent he would be able to charge for one room with a private bath had been reduced forty per cent to $6 weekly. He stated that next door, in similar accommodations, seven persons were using the same bathroom facilities, and the rent there was $5 a week. He inquired how schedules of "comparability" are drawn up to determine rents on similar housing units, and Heath said that rents on similar housing units may have been considerably unlike when the "rent freeze" went into effect April 1, 1945, and that the OPA can do nothing about changing such rents unless there has been a material increase in services, or some like change. He advised the landlord to send his case to the New York office for an impartial consideration and decision.

Asks for More Personnel

One man in the audience stated that some of the rents in this area are "terribly out of line," and said that since there are only three persons employed at the local rent office, and many persons apply daily at the United States Employment Service office for jobs, some of those persons should be employed as rent investigators to help correct inequities in the rent situation.

Heath replied that Congress has appropriated a set fund for rent office personnel, and that additional funds would be needed before such action could be taken.

At the close of the meeting Heath said that anyone in the audiente who did not get a hearing during

Nutrition Project Opens at School In Westernport

Approximately fifty pupils in the sixth grade of the Hammond street school, Westernport, were examined yesterday on the opening day of the nutrition project to be undertaken in the county by a federal nutrition unit, according to Miss Nellie Dowling, principal.

Plans for the project were completed at a conference Tuesday between Dr. Joseph P. Franklin, city and county health officer, and Dr. H. R. Sandstead, chief of the nutrition section of the United States Public Health Service.

Dr. Sandstead was accompanied by Dr. R. K. Anderson, in charge of field studies, and by Miss French Boyd and Miss Margaret McLaughlin, consultants in the nutrition section.

Present plans call for the examination of fifth and sixth grade pupils at the school. Dr. Franklin said that physical examinations, tests of the daily diets of pupils, and various laboratory tests will comprise the work of the project.

After these findings have been compiled, parents will be notified of the results. In the event any indication of anemia is found, the nutrition unit's findings will be made available to Dr. Franklin's office.

Other schools in the tri-towns area will be checked and other projects planned for the next school year, Dr. Franklin said.

Twenty Firemen To Get Training Course Awards

Cards and Certificates Will Be Presented at Relay Demonstration

Twenty firemen from five volunteer fire comanies in Allegany county will receive cards and certificates designating successful completion of the advanced firemen's training course offered by the University of Maryland extension service, E. M. McKenzie, instructor, said last night.

The cards and certificates will be presented at a program scheduled in conjunction with a water relay to be demonstrated at 2 p. m. Sunday at Cresaptown, by the five fire companies. They are Bowman's Addition, Baltimore Pike, Bedford Road, Corriganville and Cresaptown.

Bowman's Addition members who will receive cards and certificates are John Greise, Harry McLucas, David Robertson, Boyd Sulser, Herbert Sarver and Lloyd Nycum.

Dairy Employes Are Trained To Assist Regular Inspectors

Ten dairy plant employes who took part in a two-week milk control conference sponsored by the county health department are now able to act as supplemental dairy inspectors, according to W. Arnold Gunther, state bacteriologist, who was one of the instructors in the training course.

The conference, which closed early this week, was attended by representatives of dairies in Cumberland, Cresaptown, Rawlings, Midland, Mt. Savage, Keyser, W. Va., and Meyersdale, Pa.

Gunther and J. Byron Dowling, state sanitarian, were in charge of the chief part of the training program, assisted by dairy experts from the agriculture extension service of the University of Maryland.

Gunther explained that fifteen years ago, there were about 115 dairies supplying Allegany and Garrett counties, with one dairy inspector employed by the health department. Now the number of dairies have increased to approximately 450, and there are only two inspectors, one for the city and one for the county, to handle inspections.

For that reason, he said, Dr. Joseph P. Franklin, city and county health officer, met with representatives to discuss the problem, and the idea of a milk control training course developed from that conference.

Subjects covered in the training course, which was held in the Cumberland branch laboratory of the state department of health, included a discussion of the city milk code, talks on farm inspection, laboratory tests on bacteria found in milk, and plant sanitation and training.

Railroad Board Assigns Representative Here

A field representative of the National Railroad Retirement board has been assigned to Cumberland to increase service here, according to B. V. Bruce, field representative of Baltimore. A local office is to be established in Room No. 311, post office building, and the representative will be here on the second and fourth Tuesday of each month from 10 a. m., to 4 p. m., and on the second and fourth Wednesday from 8:30 a. m., to 11.30 a. m.

Increased applications for retirement by railroaders make the expanded service here necessary, it is indicated.

Maryland, District Of Columbia AFL Meeting Adjourns

C. E. Stutzman Is Elected Vice President Succeeding England

The Maryland-District of Columbia American Federation of Labor fortieth annual convention adjourned yesterday at about 5:30 o'clock, after a high-speed session with business crowded into three days of a scheduled four-day meeting, due to the housing shortage. Many delegates were unable to obtain hotel or rooming accomodations here and were forced to motor to and from Frostburg and Bedford, Pa., twice daily.

Robert J. Buxbaum, Baltimore, president of the state AFL, who was re-elected yesterday for another term, last evening thanked epresentatives of the press for their o-operation and fair coverage of the convention and expressed his appreciation to all local labor leaders, business people, delegates and others who assisted in making the convention possible here. Buxbaum said it was a busy session, but he was well pleased with the way the whole thing ran.

Frank J. Coleman, Washington, D. C., elected for his twenty-seventh term as secretary of the AFL, was enthusiastic in his praise of Cumberland and Cumberland people.

Annual Election Held

During the morning session yesterday, the annual selection was held with the president, secretary, and the treasurer Robert Lester, Washington, D. C. being elected unanimously.

Six vice-presidents were also elected without opposition, but two new members appear in this group. C. E. Stutzman, this city, president of Allegany Trades Council, was elected to succeed Paul W. England, also this city, who was unqualified to succeed himself because his union was withdrawn from the AFL. A number of delegates as well as the president and secretary praised England, who attended the convention and helped in its organization and operation as a guest delegate.

Glenn Snyder, Baltimore, of the Meat Cutters Union, was elected to fill a vacancy caused by the death of Vice President John Locker, Washington.

Four other vice presidents elected are Charles McCloskey, Washington, of the Barbers Union; Carl Schlotz, Baltimore, Electrical Workers Union; E. W. Butler, Hagerstown, Teamsters and Chauffeurs Union; and Clem F. Preller, Washington, president of the Central Labor Union and Building Trades Council.

Vincent McHenry, Baltimore, was elected organizer and Buxbaum was named delegate to the next national convention of the American Federation of Labor to be held in Chicago next fall.

Governor Unable To Attend

Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor who was scheduled to speak to the convention Thursday, had been informed that time would be arranged for him yesterday, since the convention was being concluded in three days. However, O'Conor had previous engagements which he could not postpone or cancel and sent the convention word that he could not get here yesterday.

Announcement was also made that William Green, president of the AFL, sent word that he would not be able to address the convention here but extended his greetings.

Several other scheduled speakers also sent word that they could not attend. However, John Meyers, Baltimore, an attorney and candidate for the House of Representatives from the Fourth district delivered an address.

Excellent Office Force

Among those who assisted in compiling the minutes and vast amount of routine business of the convention were people whom Coleman called, "the best office organization I have ever had."

Earl E. Manges, recorded all the proceedings in shorthand, and this was transcribed twice daily on to mimeographed stencils, so each delegate had a copy of everything that happened by the end of the day.

The office force included Miss Mickey Miles, Baltimore, mimeograph operator; Mrs. Thelma Dawson, secretary to the Washington Building Trades Council, Washington, D. C.; Miss Betty Coleman, Washington, daughter of Secretary Coleman and secretary to Washington Central Labor Union; Miss Azelma Frantz, this city, treasurer of Allegany Trades Council; Mrs. Iola Eby, Washington, secretary to Engineers Union No. 77; Russell Reynolds, Paul W. England and his two sons, Leon and Kermit England, all of this city.

Police Drag River For Missing Boy

Frederick C. "Buck" Dreyer and his rescue corps and city police were dragging the Potomac river in the vicinity of the Western Maryland railway's Welton tunnel early this morning in an attempt to find the body of Lester Kenney, 7, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Kenney, 33 Fifth street.

Police said a neighbor boy reported the Kenney lad fell in the river while he and a group of boys were playing yesterday.

The boy was reported missing by his parents at police headquarters at 7:30 o'clock last night, and four hours later officers were told he had fallen in the river.

Miss Ann Hamilton, a boarder at the Kenney home, and Miss Edith Walburn, Toledo, Ohio, the boy's aunt who is here on vacation, told The Cumberland News this story:

Lester went to St. Mary's school yesterday morning as usual but returned home shortly after because his classes were not scheduled.

About 10 a. m., Lester and some neighbor boys went out to play and he has not been seen since.

Names of the boys with whom the Kenney youngster was playing could not be learned at a late hour this morning, but police said all of them tell the same story — that Lester fell into the river.

Man Accused as Vagrant Ordered To Leave City

Raymond Giles, Wiley Ford, W. Va., was arraigned yesterday in trial magistrates court on a charge of vagrancy, and ordered to leave the city and Allegany county. He was paroled for a year.

Giles told authorities he had been in the Maryland House of Correction, "three or four times" on different charges.

McCormick Raps Black Markets In AFL Address

State OPA Director Asks Labor's Help in Fighting Inflation

Black markets and the fight against inflation are the business of organized labor . . . the business of people who consume goods, Leo H. McCormick, state OPA director, told delegates of the Maryland-District of Columbia American Federation of Labor, at their fortieth annual convention in the Fort Cumberland hotel ballroom here yesterday afternoon.

Flying here from Baltimore, McCormick arrived in time to deliver the last formal address on the convention's crowded program, only an hour before adjournment. Delegates showed their interest in what he had to say, because most of them remained to hear him speak. Some of the other speakers during the three-day session talked to as many empty chairs as they did occupied ones.

Citing numerous figures and statistics, McCormick declared that labor has played an important part in helping OPA do its job. "But the last fight has just started," he declared.

Played Vital Role

"Black markets are essentially your business," he exclaimed. "You in AFL have played a vital role in the OPA in Maryland. Our Labor Advisory council is considered to be the best in the country. You helped make it that way.

"Your people helped in the enforcement of price ceilings. One storekeeper who sold a pair of overalls at over-ceiling prices regretted his error. He paid treble damages because just one of your people helped us.

"Now you can help us in this last bitter battle against inflation.

"Your part is to continue the voluntary work on price control boards on the Labor Advisory board. It is to tell us our mistakes. It is to watch ceiling prices, and pay no more than ceiling prices.

"Meat is the important item at the moment," McCormick said. "Here is what we are doing about it. The Maryland OPA Enforcement Meat Division has gone on a twenty-four-hour day, seven-day week schedule. This is a fight to the finish and these men are determined to reach their goal and strictly enforce Slaughter Control Order No. 2.

Serves Notice On Racketeers

"We in Maryland serve notice on these racketeers that they will not be tolerated here."

McCormick urged his audience to avoid useless spending and to buy as few luxuries as possible because these items are inflated many times their true value. He told his listeners that facts will show OPA has not put anybody out of a job or curtailed production. This is an excuse, he said, used by some people in their

Suit over Legality Of Water Meters Will Be Heard

A suit to test the legality of the Cumberland ordinance for the installation of water meters by consumers, which has been pending in circuit court for more than twenty years, will be heard Tuesday, May 28, by Chief Judge William A. Huster and Associate Judge Walter C. Capper.

Former Congressman David J. Lewis filed the action for the injunction against the mayor and city council August 14, 1925. Lewis disputed the city's authority to have him install separate meters for each apartment in a building on Fayette street which he owns.

Will Submit Briefs

Former Judge D. Lindley Sloan is counsel for Lewis while City Attorney Charles Z. Heskett will represent the mayor and council. The judges have been advised that both attorneys will submit briefs and there will be no testimony at the hearing.

Lewis, who is also an attorney, filed the action in 1925, and at that time was associated with the late Charles R. Morris. A statement of facts was submitted in 1944 by opposing counsel in the case, after the original bill of complaint was amended.

The former congressman cited that he built an apartment house on Fayette street in 1923 containing twelve rental apartments and one janitor apartment in the three-story structure. The net revenue from the building in 1944 was $2,447.57, Lewis said.

Disputes Charge Provision

The petitioner said that only one city water line enters the building but the new ordinance requires him to install a meter for each tenant, or else have the minimum charge for the average home multiplied by the number of apartments. He also said that, under the ordinance, he would be required to install thirty-eight meters in the building based on the number of hot and cold water lines entering each apartment. Lewis also disputes the legality of the ordinance which provides that the minimum charge fixed by the city for one meter must be multiplied by the number of apartments, in event only one meter is installed for such a building.

Executive Board Representation For Negroes Is Debated by AFL

Resolution Creating Seventh Vice President Is Referred by Convention to Officers

The much debated question of negro representation on the executive board of the Maryland-District of Columbia American Federation of Labor was brought out again yesterday, in the closing hours of the fortieth annual state convention held in Fort Cumberland hotel ballroom here, with a wave of oratory, pro and con, sweeping through the assemblage.

For the past three or four conventions of the state AFL, negro delegates and white delegates representing several thousand negro workers affiliated with the union, have attempted to have the organization, by resolution, amend its constitution to add a seventh vice-president, to be chosen as a representative of negro membership.

Each time this resolution has been defeated, or as the delegates say "side-tracked".

Recommended Defeat

At yesterday's session, Charles McCloskey, chairmen of the resolutions committee, brought in a committee report on Resolution No. 27, recommending that it not be adopted.

The resolution, signed by Leo Nazdin and James J. Brown, of Laborers Union No. 832, and Laurence Owens and Harry Thomas, of Building Laborers Local No. 74, Washington, D. C., like its predecessors, would provide a seventh vice-president, to be a negro.

There was an immediate clamor, but President Robert J. Buxbaum held the convention to order. He urged that the resolution be debated, but delegates insisted on a vote to defeat it by concurrence with the committee's recommendation. The discussion resulted in a standing vote of 105 to defeat the resolution and 36 favoring its adoption.

The next resolution, No. 32, signed by Harry Thomas, Laborers Local No. 74, and Laurence Owens, Laborers Local No. 456, was read by McCloskey. This resolution provides for seven vice presidents, but did not mention the word negro. Again the committee on resolutions recommended that the resolution be not adopted.

Once more delegates on all sides clamored for the floor. There was a motion that the resolution be referred to the executive committee. The chairman, Buxbaum, took the floor and told the delegates the executive committee did not want the job of making the decision.

Charge Discrimination

Several delegates spoke for and several against the resolution. Several negro delegates made speeches explaining that the negro has been led to believe that there is no discrimination against him because of his race or color, but stated he is rapidly reaching the conclusion that the American Federation of Labor in Maryland does discriminate against them.

It was repeatedly brought out that this resolution does not mention the word negro, and finally one negro delegate took the floor and explained that the resolution was presented with the idea that the proposed seventh vice president would be a negro. He stated that if a seventh office is created, he believed the negro members and delegates could muster enough strength to have minority representation on the board.

Most of the negro as well as white delegates who spoke for the resolution, decried the organization's stand on the first resolution No. 27, and expressed the views that the AFL is not as democratic as it pretends to be. One white delegate, who said he represents 1,800 negro members, stated it is difficult to keep convincing them that they have a part in the union, although they contribute the same dues as anyone else.

Another white delegate said the negro is leaning more and more toward the CIO, and more and more to the left, because the AFL here in Maryland "does discriminate against him." He urged the delegates to think the matter out and not to act hastily. He said in his experience as an organizer among negro workers, he has found the average negro believes the "left-wingers" give him

Kelly Will Begin Payment of Wage Increase Monday

The recent nine cent hourly wage increase granted to workers of the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company has been approved in part by the National Wage Stabilization Board and will be added to worker's pay beginning with Monday's payroll, a company official announced last evening.

The company official said the company has been waiting only for formal approval before beginning payment of the increase. The wo of computing back pay to March will begin as soon as possible, he added.

The regional board at Philadelphia approved for price relief only five and one-half cents of the recent increase for the purpose of any possible OPA price relief, but added that the company might lawfully grant the added amounts.

The board indicated it could recommend for price relief only an eighteen and one-half cent increase for salary payroll employes.

Union officials said the union last November was granted a thirteen cent increase across the board plus a five per cent boost for incentive workers and added that some 460 service workers received an eighteen cent increase then. The nine additional cents to the hourly rate brings to twenty-seven and twenty-eight cents the increases granted here since August 19, 1945, according to Ralph C. Beard, president of Local 26, URCLPA.

Union Committee, Celanese Officials Reach Agreement On New Contract

Eight Cents an Hour Increase Approved at First of Two Local Membership Meetings

Prospects for industrial peace for another year at the Amcelle plant of the Celanese Corporation of America appeared to be bright last night.

Negotiations were concluded yesterday with representatives of Local 1874, TWUA, and the management agreeing on all major points of a new agreement.

The union's committee last night presented a unanimous report to the first of two ratification meetings of the membership at Textile hall. The rembership voted unanimously to approve the proposed contract. The second of the two ratification meetings will be held at 10 a. m. today.

While officials of the company and the union last night declined to make a statement until after today's final union meeting, representatives of the union who attended last night's meeting and representatives of the company reported that both negotiating teams are well satisfied with the agreement.

Workers Get 8 Cents

Union members announced that under the new agreement they will receive an increase of eight cents an hour across the board for all employes — the major point the union was seeking. Company representatives said this report was correct and said the company had also achieved its major aim in the current negotiations, namely, a full year of industrial peace.

Under the terms of the agreement now up for ratification, wages would be frozen for at least six months and could only be reopened at that time if the index of the Bureau of Labor Statistics goes over ten points.

This clause, of course, is to provide protection in case of runaway inflation anytime in the next twelve months. The probability of the index fluctuating to such an extent is slight unless all controls went off and the country went what one representative termed "hog wild."

Effective Until May, 1947

If ratified, the contract would be effective until May of 1947 providing the statistics index of the bureau remains reasonably stable. The increase in pay provided for the employes does not become effective, however, until the first pay week after ratification. In other words, there would be no retroactivity under the terms of the agreement.

Both Fred T. Small, plant manager, and Edward R. Allan, personnel manager, last night declined to issue statements other than to state that the negoiations had been completed with the company and union negotiators in agreement.

William Boyd Coleman, president of Local 1874, reported that the negotiating committee submitted a unanimous report which was unanimously approved by the membership at last night's meeting. Other union officials declined to issue statements.

However, it was obvious that the representatives of both the union and the company were satisfied with the contract and were hopeful that the big plant, which has been referred to as the "bread basket of Allegany county" will continue in uninterrupted operation for another year.

Representatives of the respective negotiating committees reported last night that this year's contract discussions were wholly amicable and that some concessions were made on both sides.

Small told a reporter that in his opinion "both sides did a good job" across the conference table.

Six Cents Hourly Wage Increase Is Included in Agreement

An agreement has been reached between the Cumberland and Crystal Laundries and United Laundry Workers, Local 40, CIO, Mrs. Bernadette R. Trost, president of the local, announced last evening.

An overall increase of six cents per hour for all hourly rated employes was the chief change in the working agreement which will be effective until May 28, 1947, the union official said. The wage increase brings to fifty-eight cents the minimum salary paid to members of the local.

The working agreement also contains provisions for an allowance of $10 in addition to the basic salaries for drivers during the vacation period.

Laundry workers with one year's service receive one week's paid vacation while those with over five years' service receive two weeks' vacation, and all receive six paid holidays.

The companies and union agreed that the contract may be reopened to discuss wages if Congress enacts legislation requiring laundries to pay wages higher than the minimum wages provided in the agreement or in the event that the Office of Price Administration shall remove the ceiling prices from such commodities as rents, food and clothing.

In either case, the union official said, thirty days written notice must be given before wage negotiations may begin.

McCormick Urges Careful Buying Of Scarce Goods

Asks County Residents To Support Price Control for Another Year

Urging county residents to buy only what they need of scarce commodities for the next year, until reconversion production gets rolling, Leo H. McCormick, state OPA director, said last night that if such action is taken, continued price control will bring an era of "great prosperity."

McCormick addressed seventy persons at a rent control meeting sponsored by the county OPA information panel and held in the city hall auditorium.

Citing the "vicious" black market now in operation, McCormick said that ninety per cent of the nation's producers and merchants are honest, while only the remaining ten per cent engage in black market activities.

"Through income tax investigations, the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the OPA, they will be brought to justice," he stated.

The public must be informed regarding the danger of removing price control at this time, when full-time production has not been achieved and when the average person has more spending money than he had before the war, McCormick said.

Although last year, meat production was thirty per cent above that of any year since before the war, more people have money to buy meat, and the demand is further increased by the need of feeding our occupation forces abroad, as well as providing food for starving peoples in foreign countries, the state direstor said.

Regarding the housing situation, which he termed the most critical in history, McCormick said that for the past five years there has been little or no building construction, while in the meantime the population has shown a decided increase, with the high percenatge of veterans who are getting married after leaving the service.

He said it has been estimated that when the United States went to war, there was a housing shortage of a million and a half housing units, whereas now there is a shortage of two million and a half units.

Warns of Bread Reduction

Referring to the local shortage of bread, cake and other sweet bakery products, McCormick said that the only other comparable situation in this part of the country is near Buffalo, N. Y.

Through an order of the department of Agriculture, bakers will get only seventy-five per cent of the amount of flour that they got before the war, and that means that county residents must suffer a twenty-five per cent reduction in available supplies of bread for the next six or eight weeks.

Walter R. Heath, district rent executive, gave a short talk on rent control, pointing out that next to food, rent is the largest item in the average man's budget, and adding that at the present time there are 300,000 dwelling units in the state registered with the rent division of the OPA.

Citing the pressure being brought on Congress now to put into effect a fifteen per cent increase on all rents, Heath stated emphatically that no such increase has been allowed as yet, and told tenants who are paying more than the amount of rent authorized by the OPA to get in touch with the area rent office.

He said that in the past year, the local rent office, staffed by three persons, has had 2,000 tenants' complaints, has interviewed 3,000 persons and has handled more than 5,000 telephone calls.

After World War I, Heath said, rents increased from twenty-five to 100 per cent, the average being an increase of fifty-four per cent. Due to rent control, however, the average increase since the beginning of World War II is less than four per cent, he stated.

Open Forum Held

Nearly an hour of the two-hour meeting was devoted to a forum discussion, in which landlords stated their personal rent problems. Questions were answered by Heath and Thomas E. Barrett, Jr., chief rent attorney for the state OPA office, and complaints were referred to Caleb White, area rent director, who was also present.

One landlord asked whether it is permissible for rent inspectors to inspect a housing unit when the owner is absent. When Heath said that such action was not permissible, the landlord stated that White had inspected one of his rented apartments when no one was on the premises. Heath said he would take the matter up with White personally.

Another landlord stated that the OPA had notified him that the rent he would be able to charge for one room with a private bath had been reduced forty per cent to $6 weekly. He stated that next door, in similar accommodations, seven persons were using the same bathroom facilities, and the rent there was $5 a week. He inquired how schedules of "comparability" are drawn up to determine rents on similar housing units, and Heath said that rents on similar housing units may have been considerably unlike when the "rent freeze" went into effect April 1, 1945, and that the OPA can do nothing about changing such rents unless there has been a material increase in services, or some like change. He advised the landlord to send his case to the New York office for an impartial consideration and decision.

Asks for More Personnel

One man in the audience stated that some of the rents in this area are "terribly out of line," and said that since there are only three persons employed at the local rent office, and many persons apply daily at the United States Employment Service office for jobs, some of those persons should be employed as rent investigators to help correct inequities in the rent situation.

Heath replied that Congress has appropriated a set fund for rent office personnel, and that additional funds would be needed before such action could be taken.

At the close of the meeting Heath said that anyone in the audiente who did not get a hearing during

Nutrition Project Opens at School In Westernport

Approximately fifty pupils in the sixth grade of the Hammond street school, Westernport, were examined yesterday on the opening day of the nutrition project to be undertaken in the county by a federal nutrition unit, according to Miss Nellie Dowling, principal.

Plans for the project were completed at a conference Tuesday between Dr. Joseph P. Franklin, city and county health officer, and Dr. H. R. Sandstead, chief of the nutrition section of the United States Public Health Service.

Dr. Sandstead was accompanied by Dr. R. K. Anderson, in charge of field studies, and by Miss French Boyd and Miss Margaret McLaughlin, consultants in the nutrition section.

Present plans call for the examination of fifth and sixth grade pupils at the school. Dr. Franklin said that physical examinations, tests of the daily diets of pupils, and various laboratory tests will comprise the work of the project.

After these findings have been compiled, parents will be notified of the results. In the event any indication of anemia is found, the nutrition unit's findings will be made available to Dr. Franklin's office.

Other schools in the tri-towns area will be checked and other projects planned for the next school year, Dr. Franklin said.

Twenty Firemen To Get Training Course Awards

Cards and Certificates Will Be Presented at Relay Demonstration

Twenty firemen from five volunteer fire comanies in Allegany county will receive cards and certificates designating successful completion of the advanced firemen's training course offered by the University of Maryland extension service, E. M. McKenzie, instructor, said last night.

The cards and certificates will be presented at a program scheduled in conjunction with a water relay to be demonstrated at 2 p. m. Sunday at Cresaptown, by the five fire companies. They are Bowman's Addition, Baltimore Pike, Bedford Road, Corriganville and Cresaptown.

Bowman's Addition members who will receive cards and certificates are John Greise, Harry McLucas, David Robertson, Boyd Sulser, Herbert Sarver and Lloyd Nycum.

Dairy Employes Are Trained To Assist Regular Inspectors

Ten dairy plant employes who took part in a two-week milk control conference sponsored by the county health department are now able to act as supplemental dairy inspectors, according to W. Arnold Gunther, state bacteriologist, who was one of the instructors in the training course.

The conference, which closed early this week, was attended by representatives of dairies in Cumberland, Cresaptown, Rawlings, Midland, Mt. Savage, Keyser, W. Va., and Meyersdale, Pa.

Gunther and J. Byron Dowling, state sanitarian, were in charge of the chief part of the training program, assisted by dairy experts from the agriculture extension service of the University of Maryland.

Gunther explained that fifteen years ago, there were about 115 dairies supplying Allegany and Garrett counties, with one dairy inspector employed by the health department. Now the number of dairies have increased to approximately 450, and there are only two inspectors, one for the city and one for the county, to handle inspections.

For that reason, he said, Dr. Joseph P. Franklin, city and county health officer, met with representatives to discuss the problem, and the idea of a milk control training course developed from that conference.

Subjects covered in the training course, which was held in the Cumberland branch laboratory of the state department of health, included a discussion of the city milk code, talks on farm inspection, laboratory tests on bacteria found in milk, and plant sanitation and training.

Railroad Board Assigns Representative Here

A field representative of the National Railroad Retirement board has been assigned to Cumberland to increase service here, according to B. V. Bruce, field representative of Baltimore. A local office is to be established in Room No. 311, post office building, and the representative will be here on the second and fourth Tuesday of each month from 10 a. m., to 4 p. m., and on the second and fourth Wednesday from 8:30 a. m., to 11.30 a. m.

Increased applications for retirement by railroaders make the expanded service here necessary, it is indicated.

C. E. Stutzman Is Elected Vice President Succeeding England

The Maryland-District of Columbia American Federation of Labor fortieth annual convention adjourned yesterday at about 5:30 o'clock, after a high-speed session with business crowded into three days of a scheduled four-day meeting, due to the housing shortage. Many delegates were unable to obtain hotel or rooming accomodations here and were forced to motor to and from Frostburg and Bedford, Pa., twice daily.

Robert J. Buxbaum, Baltimore, president of the state AFL, who was re-elected yesterday for another term, last evening thanked representatives of the press for their co-operation and fair coverage of the convention and expressed his appreciation to all local labor leaders, business people, delegates and others who assisted in making the convention possible here. Buxbaum said it was a busy session, but he was well pleased with the way the whole thing ran.

Frank J. Coleman, Washington, D. C., elected for his twenty-seventh term as secretary of the AFL, was enthusiastic in his praise of Cumberland and Cumberland people.

Annual Election Held

During the morning session yesterday, the annual selection was held with the president, secretary, and the treasurer Robert Lester, Washington, D. C. being elected unanimously.

Six vice-presidents were also elected without opposition, but two new members appear in this group. C. E. Stutzman, this city, president of Allegany Trades Council, was elected to succeed Paul W. England, also this city, who was unqualified to succeed himself because his union was withdrawn from the AFL. A number of delegates as well as the president and secretary praised England, who attended the convention and helped in its organization and operation as a guest delegate.

Glenn Snyder, Baltimore, of the Meat Cutters Union, was elected to fill a vacancy caused by the death of Vice President John Locker, Washington.

Four other vice presidents elected are Charles McCloskey, Washington, of the Barbers Union; Carl Schlotz, Baltimore, Electrical Workers Union; E. W. Butler, Hagerstown, Teamsters and Chauffeurs Union; and Clem F. Preller, Washington, president of the Central Labor Union and Building Trades Council.

Vincent McHenry, Baltimore, was elected organizer and Buxbaum was named delegate to the next national convention of the American Federation of Labor to be held in Chicago next fall.

Governor Unable To Attend

Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor who was scheduled to speak to the convention Thursday, had been informed that time would be arranged for him yesterday, since the convention was being concluded in three days. However, O'Conor had previous engagements which he could not postpone or cancel and sent the convention word that he could not get here yesterday.

Announcement was also made that William Green, president of the AFL, sent word that he would not be able to address the convention here but extended his greetings.

Several other scheduled speakers also sent word that they could not attend. However, John Meyers, Baltimore, an attorney and candidate for the House of Representatives from the Fourth district delivered an address.

Excellent Office Force

Among those who assisted in compiling the minutes and vast amount of routine business of the convention were people whom Coleman called, "the best office organization I have ever had."

Earl E. Manges, recorded all the proceedings in shorthand, and this was transcribed twice daily on to mimeographed stencils, so each delegate had a copy of everything that happened by the end of the day.

The office force included Miss Mickey Miles, Baltimore, mimeograph operator; Mrs. Thelma Dawson, secretary to the Washington Building Trades Council, Washington, D. C.; Miss Betty Coleman, Washington, daughter of Secretary Coleman and secretary to Washington Central Labor Union; Miss Azelma Frantz, this city, treasurer of Allegany Trades Council; Mrs. Iola Eby, Washington, secretary to Engineers Union No. 77; Russell Reynolds, Paul W. England and his two sons, Leon and Kermit England, all of this city.

Police Drag River For Missing Boy

Frederick C. "Buck" Dreyer and his rescue corps and city police were dragging the Potomac river in the vicinity of the Western Maryland railway's Welton tunnel early this morning in an attempt to find the body of Lester Kenney, 7, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Kenney, 33 Fifth street.

Police said a neighbor boy reported the Kenney lad fell in the river while he and a group of boys were playing yesterday.

The boy was reported missing by his parents at police headquarters at 7:30 o'clock last night, and four hours later officers were told he had fallen in the river.

Miss Ann Hamilton, a boarder at the Kenney home, and Miss Edith Walburn, Toledo, Ohio, the boy's aunt who is here on vacation, told The Cumberland News this story:

Lester went to St. Mary's school yesterday morning as usual but returned home shortly after because his classes were not scheduled.

About 10 a. m., Lester and some neighbor boys went out to play and he has not been seen since.

Names of the boys with whom the Kenney youngster was playing could not be learned at a late hour this morning, but police said all of them tell the same story — that Lester fell into the river.

Man Accused as Vagrant Ordered To Leave City

Raymond Giles, Wiley Ford, W. Va., was arraigned yesterday in trial magistrates court on a charge of vagrancy, and ordered to leave the city and Allegany county. He was paroled for a year.

Giles told authorities he had been in the Maryland House of Correction, "three or four times" on different charges.

McCormick Raps Black Markets In AFL Address

State OPA Director Asks Labor's Help in Fighting Inflation

Black markets and the fight against inflation are the business of organized labor . . . the business of people who consume goods, Leo H. McCormick, state OPA director, told delegates of the Maryland-District of Columbia American Federation of Labor, at their fortieth annual convention in the Fort Cumberland hotel ballroom here yesterday afternoon.

Flying here from Baltimore, McCormick arrived in time to deliver the last formal address on the convention's crowded program, only an hour before adjournment. Delegates showed their interest in what he had to say, because most of them remained to hear him speak. Some of the other speakers during the three-day session talked to as many empty chairs as they did occupied ones.

Citing numerous figures and statistics, McCormick declared that labor has played an important part in helping OPA do its job. "But the last fight has just started," he declared.

Played Vital Role

"Black markets are essentially your business," he exclaimed. "You in AFL have played a vital role in the OPA in Maryland. Our Labor Advisory council is considered to be the best in the country. You helped make it that way.

"Your people helped in the enforcement of price ceilings. One storekeeper who sold a pair of overalls at over-ceiling prices regretted his error. He paid treble damages because just one of your people helped us.

"Now you can help us in this last bitter battle against inflation.

"Your part is to continue the voluntary work on price control boards, on the Labor Advisory board. It is to tell us our mistakes. It is to watch ceiling prices, and pay no more than ceiling prices.

"Meat is the important item at the moment," McCormick said. "Here is what we are doing about it. The Maryland OPA Enforcement Meat Division has gone on a twenty-four-hour day, seven-day week schedule. This is a fight to the finish and these men are determined to reach their goal and strictly enforce Slaughter Control Order No. 2.

Serves Notice On Racketeers

"We in Maryland serve notice on these racketeers that they will not be tolerated here."

McCormick urged his audience to avoid useless spending and to buy as few luxuries as possible because these items are inflated many times their true value. He told his listeners that facts will show OPA has not put anybody out of a job or curtailed production. This is an excuse, he said, used by some people in their

Suit over Legality Of Water Meters Will Be Heard

A suit to test the legality of the Cumberland ordinance for the installation of water meters by consumers, which has been pending in circuit court for more than twenty years, will be heard Tuesday, May 28, by Chief Judge William A. Huster and Associate Judge Walter C. Capper.

Former Congressman David J. Lewis filed the action for the injunction against the mayor and city council August 14, 1925. Lewis disputed the city's authority to have him install separate meters for each apartment in a building on Fayette street which he owns.

Will Submit Briefs

Former Judge D. Lindley Sloan is counsel for Lewis while City Attorney Charles Z. Heskett will represent the mayor and council. The judges have been advised that both attorneys will submit briefs and there will be no testimony at the hearing.

Lewis, who is also an attorney, filed the action in 1925, and at that time was associated with the late Charles R. Morris. A statement of facts was submitted in 1944 by opposing counsel in the case, after the original bill of complaint was amended.

The former congressman cited that he built an apartment house on Fayette street in 1923 containing twelve rental apartments and one janitor apartment in the three-story structure. The net revenue from the building in 1944 was $2,447.57, Lewis said.

Disputes Charge Provision

The petitioner said that only one city water line enters the building but the new ordinance requires him to install a meter for each tenant, or else have the minimum charge for the average home multiplied by the number of apartments. He also said that, under the ordinance, he would be required to install thirty-eight meters in the building based on the number of hot and cold water lines entering each apartment. Lewis also disputes the legality of the ordinance which provides that the minimum charge fixed by the city for one meter must be multiplied by the number of apartments, in event only one meter is installed for such a building.

Executive Board Representation For Negroes Is Debated by AFL

The much debated question of negro representation on the executive board of the Maryland-District of Columbia American Federation of Labor was brought out again yesterday, in the closing hours of the fortieth annual state convention held in Fort Cumberland hotel ballroom here, with a wave of oratory, pro and con, sweeping through the assemblage.

For the past three or four conventions of the state AFL, negro delegates and white delegates representing several thousand negro workers affiliated with the union, have attempted to have the organization, by resolution, amend its constitution to add a seventh vice-president, to be chosen as a representative of negro membership.

Each time this resolution has been defeated, or as the delegates say "side-tracked".

Recommended Defeat

At yesterday's session, Charles McCloskey, chairmen of the resolutions committee, brought in a committee report on Resolution No. 27, recommending that it not be adopted.

The resolution, signed by Leo Nazdin and James J. Brown, of Laborers Union No. 832, and Laurence Owens and Harry Thomas, of Building Laborers Local No. 74, Washington, D. C., like its predecessors, would provide a seventh vice-president, to be a negro.

There was an immediate clamor, but President Robert J. Buxbaum held the convention to order. He urged that the resolution be debated, but delegates insisted on a vote to defeat it by concurrence with the committee's recommendation. The discussion resulted in a standing vote of 105 to defeat the resolution and 36 favoring its adoption.

The next resolution, No. 32, signed by Harry Thomas, Laborers Local No. 74, and Laurence Owens, Laborers Local No. 456, was read by McCloskey. This resolution provides for seven vice presidents, but did not mention the word negro. Again the committee on resolutions recommended that the resolution be not adopted.

Once more delegates on all sides clamored for the floor. There was a motion that the resolution be referred to the executive committee. The chairman, Buxbaum, took the floor and told the delegates the executive committee did not want the job of making the decision.

Charge Discrimination

Several delegates spoke for and several against the resolution. Several negro delegates made speeches explaining that the negro has been led to believe that there is no discrimination against him because of his race or color, but stated he is rapidly reaching the conclusion that the American Federation of Labor in Maryland does discriminate against them.

It was repeatedly brought out that this resolution does not mention the word negro, and finally one negro delegate took the floor and explained that the resolution was presented with the idea that the proposed seventh vice president would be a negro. He stated that if a seventh office is created, he believed the negro members and delegates could muster enough strength to have minority representation on the board.

Most of the negro as well as white delegates who spoke for the resolution, decried the organization's stand on the first resolution No. 27, and expressed the views that the AFL is not as democratic as it pretends to be. One white delegate, who said he represents 1,800 negro members, stated it is difficult to keep convincing them that they have a part in the union, although they contribute the same dues as anyone else.

Another white delegate said the negro is leaning more and more toward the CIO, and more and more to the left, because the AFL here in Maryland "does discriminate against him." He urged the delegates to think the matter out and not to act hastily. He said in his experience as an organizer among negro workers, he has found the average negro believes the "left-wingers" give him

The recent nine cent hourly wage increase granted to workers of the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company has been approved in part by the National Wage Stabilization Board and will be added to worker's pay beginning with Monday's payroll, a company official announced last evening.

The company official said the company has been waiting only for formal approval before beginning payment of the increase. The work of computing back pay to March 1 will begin as soon as possible, he added.

The regional board at Philadelphia approved for price relief only five and one-half cents of the recent increase for the purpose of any possible OPA price relief, but added that the company might lawfully grant the added amounts.

The board indicated it could recommend for price relief only an eighteen and one-half cent increase for salary payroll employes.

Union officials said the union last November was granted a thirteen cent increase across the board plus a five per cent boost for incentive workers and added that some 460 service workers received an eighteen cent increase then. The nine additional cents to the hourly rate brings to twenty-seven and twenty-eight cents the increases granted here since August 19, 1945, according to Ralph C. Beard, president of Local 26, URCLPA.
